Commission Accuses Duffy of 'Buck Passing'

CIVIL SERVICE PROSECUTIONS HIT BY BOARD

BULLETIN

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Atty. Gen. Herbert S. Duffy directed today that about 100 civil service employes of the state be questioned to determine if they had been solicited for Democratic campaign contributions.

COLUMBUS — The state civil service commission today accused Attorney General Herbert S. Duffy of "passing the buck" in the matter of prosecutions for violation of civil service regulations.

Two cases involving purported violations have been presented to the commission in recent weeks. The first concerned circulation of petitions asking Governor Davey to be a candidate for re-nomination. The second concerned the 5 per cent assessment against state employes' salaries for the Democratic campaign fund.

Not Enforcement Body.

The commission reiterated that it is a semi-judicial body and not a law enforcement agency, and that the attorney general is responsible for bringing criminal action against alleged violators.

The commission said it would not permit removal from office of any civil service employe for refusal to make compaign contributions or engage in political activity.

"Let us emphasize what we have repeatedly written to the attorney general, that the state civil service commission tenders him, as the chief law enforcement officer of the state, our full co-operation in the prosecution of alleged criminal violations of the civil service laws," the commission said.

"We do not intend to assume the duties of the attorney general," Ralph Emmons, commission member, said.

The commission announced to-

April Heat Sends Mercury to Official 82, But 90 In Sun

An April heat wave gripped Mansfield today, sending the mercury to 82, the highest mark of the year, according to Otto Sprunger, weather observer.

Naturally, it was hotter in the sun—Sprunger reporting a reading of 90 there.

Other Ohio cities also were sweltering.

At Columbus, the temperature was 83, the highest for April 27 since 1899. An all-time record of 86 was established at Youngstown, beating the previous mark of 85 for this date, established in 1935.

It will be fair and warm tonight, according to the forecast, but showers are scheduled for tomorrow, and the heat wave will probably cool off. It's too early for 90-degree temperatures anyhow.

Yesterday's high was 77, and the low last night was 46, about half of today's mark.

Albania Gay As King Zog Takes Bride

Wedding In Royal Palace Unites Ruler, Countess, Partly American.

(By International News Service)

TIRANA—In a brilliant but brief ceremony attended by distinguished personages from all over Europe, King Zog of Moslem Albania today married beautiful Countess Geraldine Apponyi of Hungary.

With the ceremony completed, this small but colorful capital prepared for a round of gay festivities tonight in celebration of the wedding.

The marriage was performed by the president of the Albanian parliament within the glittering royal palace, which was sumptuously decorated for the event.

Foreign guests, diplomats and other representatives from the outside world cheered and congratulated King Zog and his queen, the first Roman Catholic and partly American queen this ancient country has ever had.

* * *

She is the daughter of a landed Hungarian nobleman, now dead, and the former Gladys Virginia Stewart of New York, who now resides in France.

The wedding occurred at 10:30 a. m. As soon as it was completed, the entire population of Tirana went wild with enthusiasm.

Streets adjoining the palace grounds were a riot of color and gaiety as Albanian Moslems gave themselves over to celebration.

Before the wedding, Mohammedans and Christians prayed for the ruler and his bride in churches throughout the nation, seeking happiness for the royal couple.

* * *

Later, in Tirana, residents rushed to the streets and the traditional, picturesque Albanian folk dances. Flowers were strewn about the ground as the festivities continued.

The wedding ended the long, highly publicized search conducted by Zog for a suitable bride. At one time he was hunting for a rich American heiress. But he gave up all idea of such a mate when he caught site of the glamorous 23-year-old Countess Geraldine, 20 years his junior.

LONE-HANDED

Davey to Direct Own Drive for Votes; Split Denied.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Martin L. Davey will direct his own campaign for a third term as governor of Ohio, but in complete accord with State Democratic Chairman Francis W. Poulson.

Poulson said today this plan had been decided upon, but that it in no way reflected a split between him and the governor, which has been rumored occasionally the last four years.

"The governor and I are on the friendliest of terms and there is every indication that we will remain that way," Poulson said.

The Democratic chieftain discounted published reports of a rift between himself and either the executive or Mrs. Myrna Smith, Davey's private secretary.

Planned Crimes to Overcome Insomnia, Paroled Inmate Says

A new means of overcoming insomnia—not prescribed by physicians and definitely out with the law—was given by a former Mansfield reformatory inmate arraigned in Delaware today on three charges in connection with the kidnaping and robbing of Ohio Wesleyan university students last Saturday night.

State highway patrolmen quoted the 18-year-old youth, John J. Deitch, as saying he had perpetrated the crime as a means of overcoming insomnia which had troubled him for three nights previous.

When aroused from his slumber and arraigned before Mayor Hosea Spaulding in Delaware on two counts of kidnaping, Deitch, still sleepy-eyed, declared, "I'm not guilty of no kidnaping."

Pleading guilty to a third charge of robbing another student, Deitch was ordered held to the grand jury under $5,000 bond

LIQUOR, BEER DEALERS PLAN OWN POLICING

County Permit Holders Name Committee of Seven to Set Up Association.

AIM AT RETAIL VIOLATORS

Organization Urged by Liquor Board Member to 'Save Your Business.'

Richland county retail liquor and beer permit holders today had taken steps toward "policing" their own business.

Meeting at the Mansfield-Leland hotel last night, they named a committee of seven to draft plans for a county-wide association of permit-holders, and it was indicated that one of the aims of the organization would be to drive out of business permit-holders who violate regulations and bring the retail liquor business into bad repute.

Urged To Help Themselves.

The committee was named after Wellington T. Leonard, formerly of Mansfield, and a member of the state board of liquor control, told the permit holders that the commission wanted to "save your business" for them, and called on them to help themselves.

"A man with an investment surely wants to safeguard that investment," he said. "The salvation of your business is to teach and practice moderation."

He pointed out that public opinion was being molded against the liquor business as a whole because of the misconduct of a few.

Warns Of Local Option.

Leonard suggested an organization for the retailers to clear the way for the future of the business that would not make a local option necessary, adding that the association could do their own policing and force out of business the unlawful operator.

"The selling of intoxicants to minors will not be tolerated and gambling in any permit holders establishment is contrary to state regulations—whether it's a pinball

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(INS)— Henry Ford, motor magnate and consistent opponent of the New Deal, arrived in the capital today to lunch with President Roosevelt at the White House and discuss the business problems of the nation. (By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—A pledge by 16 top-ranking industrialists and financiers to cooperate with administration efforts to aid business created a dramatic prelude today for President Roosevelt's conference with Henry Ford.

Many observers predicted their promise of assistance in restoring "confidence and normal business conditions," apparently inspired by Mr. Roosevelt's recent "fireside chat," would help clear the way for a new period of teamwork between government and business.

There was a prospect that Mr. Roosevelt would invite the signers, including Owen D. Young, General Electric chairman, and Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National bank, to confer with him at an early date.

Others at Luncheon.

Ford, who has been at odds with administration policies more often than he has approved them, was scheduled to meet with the chief executive for an informal luncheon.

Also invited to the conference were Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the federal reserve board; Edsel Ford, son of the motor magnate and president of the Ford Motor company, and W. J. Cameron, public relations counsel for the company.

JACOBS TO SEND LOUIS AGAINST MAXIE IN YANKS' STADIUM JUNE 22.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK—(INS)—After having spent considerable time playing fish-eye with himself, Promoter Jacobs blandly announced yesterday what everybody had pretty much taken for granted all along—that Max Schmeling and Joe Louis would meet in their world's heavyweight championship fight at the Yankee stadium, New York.

Chicago, Detroit, and Philadelphia had made overtures for the June 22 brawl but an overture is only a beginning, whereas the dotted line is the consummation and the end and that's exactly where the stadium people are understood to have been for some time. If this one plays to "scale," the crowd will be better than 80,000 and the gate $1,440,000, the fourth greatest gate in history. It took Dempsey to bring about the other three.

Of course, there was something very vague alluded to in yesterday's announcement about the Yankee stadium being certain "unless developments unforseen arose, necessitating a shift in site." I may say in less rhetorical terms that what the boys refer to here is the possibility of anti-Nazi boycott of Schmeling and I feel impelled to add that this hardly seems as urgent as once it did.

When Schmeling fought here four months ago, for instance, a sellout of $75,000 brushed by a pavement parade to watch him fight Harry Thomas, at the time, was well known only to Mrs. Thomas, his wife.

It was the first time Schmeling had been back in American circulation since the boisterous evening he all but beheaded Louis here some 18 months before, but they're always willing to wait when a man's that good.

And they've been waiting overlong for the revival of that theatrical night when Schmeling, down in the betting at 5-1, clipped Louis on the chin in the fourth round for a knockdown, dropped him several times thereafter and finally left him as inert as a dish towel on the ropes in the 12th. Now that Louis has come into the title, there are three qualified experts to one who say Schmeling can't do it again.

So don't tell me that kind of a venture can miss at the gate. Anyhow, I won't attempt to tell you.

Advance Orders Total $100,000.

JACOBS says he already has $100,000 in hand in advance orders and, even allowing for the glib city talk of boxing promoters who are always being carried away by their boyish enthusiasm, that's much more than Rickard had ahead of the Tunney-Dempsey fight at Chicago, which did an all-time record of $2,600,000.

For the present promotion, Jacobs is planning the first 12 rows on the flat and the next 25 rows to be slightly raised, making 12,000 of these seats, in all, at $30 apiece. The rest of his prices run down the scale from $20 to $16.50 to $11.50 to $7.75 to $5.75, including tax. There also will be a certain number of unreserved seats placed on sale at $3.50 on the day of the fight.

'Gas-House Gang' Misses Mr. Dizzy

Cardinals Also Show They Need Medwick as They Drop Another Game to Reds, 8 to 7.

By GAYLE TALBOT, Associated Press Sports Writer.

THE AMAZING COLLAPSE of the St. Louis Cardinals at the outset of the National league race is causing more comment in the baseball dugouts than the failure of the Yankees to start off at their customary clip.

The players and managers have a strong hunch that the Yanks are due to start pouring it on the ball about tomorrow, when Joe DiMaggio likely will break into the line-up as a pinch-hitter. But they don't know about the Cardinals. They suspect that the departure of Dizzy Dean has taken a lot more out of the Birds than generally was thought.

Put Fight Into Cards.

Dizzy didn't get along with Manager Frankie Frisch, the rival players admit, yet they declare he put fight into the Cards and embodied more than any other member of the team the spirit of the "Gas House Gang." They said the Cards are going to miss more than Dizzy's pitching, and it begins to look like they're right.

Yesterday, with Slugger Joe Medwick still out of the line-up, the Cards dropped their seventh game in eight starts, a 10-inning, 8 to 7 decision to Cincinnati. And this, even after Curt Davis, the pitcher obtained from Chicago, hit a homerun with three on in the fourth. The Reds scored all their runs in the last four frames, lambasting Davis and his four successors impartially.

The last of the undefeated teams went under as the Chicago Cubs bunched two triples and a single in the tenth to halt Pittsburgh's mad career, 5 to 3. Tex Carleton went the route for the winners, checking the Pirates with eight hits. Tony Lazzeri, ex-Yank, clouted a homerun.

Homeruns by Mel Ott and Jim Ripple featured the New York Giants' 12 to 8 win over the Phillies. Carl Hubbell, whose turn it was to toil for the Giants, is laid up with a heavy cold.

Jim Turner pitched his second smooth victory for the Boston Bees as they trimmed Brooklyn, 4 to 1, limiting the Dodgers to five hits.

The Yankees put on their first big inning of the season to even things with the Philadelphia Athletics by a score of 5 to 3. They did it all in the third, Lou Gehrig driving one run across with a double and Joe Gordon, rookie second baseman, hitting one out of the park with one aboard.

Bonura Big Help.

Owner Clark Griffith of the Washington Senators continues to chortle at his acquisition of Zeke Bonura. The hefty first baseman parked one in the stands in the seventh round, scoring a mate ahead of him and beating Johnny Marcum of Boston, 6 to 4.

Elden Auker of Detroit let the St. Louis Browns down with five hits and beat them, 7 to 1. Gehringer hit a three-bagger and two singles for the Tigers.

1938 Eleven Plays Graduates Friday

A fair idea as to what Mansfield high school has in the way of football material will be on display at 3:15 p. m. Friday at Empire field, located out Fourth street, when Coach Russ Murphy sends his 1938 candidates into action against last fall's eleven, captained by Johnny Hallabrin, in a regulation game.

Although a number of the gridsters Murphy plans to use in the lineup next fall will be with the track team in Erie, Pa., a fairly strong lineup will be sent against the graduates. The game is open to the public, Murphy stated.

Red Streaks Carry Mansfield Colors at Erie, Pa.

Track Team First High School Athletic Squad To Compete Over State Lines.

THE first out-of-state apearance for any Mansfield high school athletic team will be made Friday when Coach Harry Mehock's tracksters invade Erie, Pa., for a dual tussle with Strong Vincent, a competitor in the Mansfield Relays last week.

According to present plans, Mehock and a squad of approximately 25 athletes will make the trip to Erie Friday morning.

Should Offer Trouble.

While Mansfield's chances for victory do not appear bright, Mehock expects the Red Streaks to make a fair showing against the Strong Vincents.

The Erie school finished fourth in the Relays, while Mansfield landed well down in the standings with only six.

Mansfield's only points were accumulated by John Linta, who established a new record in the pole vault with a height of 12 feet, 8½ inches.

The Erie school's outstanding performer is James Callista, who failed to repeat his victory in the sprints in the Relays last week because of a bad ankle.

Callista Rests.

Red Cochrane, coach of the Erie school, stated at the Relays that he would rest Callista this week in an attempt to have him in shape for the Mansfield invasion.

Mansfield started preparations for the Erie meet with a lengthy workout yesterday.

Rollie's Back In Good Graces

Bad boy of the American league, Rollie Hemsley, catcher for the Cleveland Indians, sent home for the second time this season and fined $250 following an alleged training rule infraction in Detroit, gets a hearing before C. C. Slapnicka, general manager of the Indians, in Cleveland. Hemsley is at right. Slapnicka reinstated Hemsley and sent him on to Chicago to rejoin the Indians.

Indians Go on Hitting Spree as They Top White Sox, 10 to 6, for Sixth Straight.

CHICAGO—Mel Harder and Thornton Lee, former Tribe southpaw, were the rival hurlers today in the last of the current series between the Cleveland Indians and Chicago White Sox.

Rollie Hemsley, backstop who ran afoul Manager Oscar Vitt under suspicious circumstances and was fined $250, returned to the Cleveland tepee yesterday, but Vitt assigned Frankie Pytlak to catch Harder. This battery turned in a shining performance against Detroit last Friday.

It appeared that Hemsley would not see action until Bob Feller takes the mound Friday at St. Louis. Johnny Allen, who has expressed a preference for Pytlak's catching, will hurl against the Browns tomorrow.

Rank at Top Today.

After the season passes out of its early stages, the Cleveland Indians may be forced to concede an advantage in power to some American league rival, but today the Tribe's sluggers ranked at the top.

Cleveland won its sixth straight game here yesterday when it defeated the Chicago White Sox 10-6.

The Indians were forced to come from behind three times to gain the decision, but once the powerhouse batters of the club launched the attack the White Sox hurlers were powerless to halt it.

Chicago scored one run in the first inning and added another in the second. Cleveland tied the score in the fifth, but the White Sox came back in their half of the round to push across two more counters and again take the lead.

The Indians scored twice more in the sixth, but Chicago retained the lead by pushing across one counter in its half of the inning. Then Cleveland turned loose its power to score once in the seventh, three times in the eighth and twice in the ninth.

The Indians pounded Merritt Cain, Bill Cox and John Rigney for 18 hits, four of which were doubles. Lyn Lary, Earl Averill and Hal Trosky each secured three safeties to pace the attack.

Scores Second Win.

Earl Whitehill was Cleveland's starting hurler and gained credit for the triumph, his second of the season. He gave up 10 hits in the seven and two-third innings he worked. Denny Galehouse finished the contest and did not permit a hit.

Record Crowd Sees Champs Crowned in J. A. C. Tourney

Curley Miller, Tom Clemens of Mansfield Annex Mitt Titles In Finals at Y. M. C. A.

By CHARLES MARTIN

TWO MANSFIELD LADS were numbered among the youngsters who won championships in the finals of the Junior Association of Commerce A. A. U. boxing tournament at the Y. M. C. A. last night before the largest crowd ever to see a simon-pure mittfest in the city. The crowd totaled 900.

The standout of those two simon-pure leather slingers was little "Curley" Miller, hard-punching lightweight, who toppled Beauford Glover, slugging Friendly House star, from the undefeated list in a wild three-round final bout that had the fans roaring from the opening gong.

Miller, a protege of Jimmy Wilde, finished in a blaze of glory to hand the settlement boxer his first defeat since he made his debut two years ago.

Glover, after getting off to a splendid start with a flurry of blows that had Miller backed into the ropes, began slowing up and in the second round the new champion had things just about his own way, scoring repeatedly with a right to the head.

Miller's flashy last-round exhibition of slugging won the verdict of the judges, Henry Them, Paul Eliot and Ray Morgan.

It was Miller's first bid for the lightweight crown. Before last night he had always fought in the featherweight division.

Defeats Dolce.

The other Mansfield lad to come through with a title was Tom Clemens, Friendly House flyweight. The Settlement boy defeated Frankie Dolce, 99-pound Crestline youth. Dolce, who established himself as a favorite in the 112-pound class last week with a pair of clever victories, spotted Clemens 13 pounds, but never gave any ground.

Frankie got his left working for a while last night and the rabid fans gave him a tremendous hand as he temporarily halted the advance of the heavier Clemens.

Clemens landed some hard blows but was unable to floor Dolce for keeps. Dolce went down for a nine count in the second round and then came right back with a display of courage that had the fans shouting words of encouragement.

Ernie McKinley, featherweight of Ashland, who won the award of the outstanding fighter of the tournament, turned in two classy performances on the card which proved to be one of the finest staged in Mansfield in recent years.

McKinley scored two technical knockouts. He first appeared in a semi-final against Kid Carmel of the Friendly House and won in 29½ seconds of the second round. Carmel was hanging on the ropes when his seconds tossed in the towel. The victories last night were McKinley's tenth and eleventh straight.

The Ashland flash then faced Salvador Duran of Fremont and disposed of him in 19 seconds. Duran never landed a blow.

Wins In Second.

Bud Sturzingeer of Sandusky showed considerable class in the light-heavyweight finals by winning on a technical knockout in 21 seconds of the second round over Merle Kleinknecht of Crestline. It was Sturzinger the whole way. Kleinkneecht landed a couple of hard blows but couldn't stand up under the terrific beating handed out by the Sandusky lad.

Dale Oyster, 185, of Ashland, won the heavyweight championship by taking a decision from Jack Barlow, 183, of Bucyrus. After an even opening round, Oyster began landing the blows that won him the title.

Phil Ganni, 152, of Crestline, annexed the middleweight crown by winning a decision over Pete Danhoff of Willard. After some toe to toe slugging in the first round, the two lads slowed down, both looking for an opening to land a knockout punch.

Melvin McKinley, younger brother of Ernie, took the bantamweight crown by decisioning Walter Kennedy, an Ashland stablemate. Kennedy pressed his opponent at times, but McKinley packed too much class.

Frankie Parker, slugging left hand puncher, won on a technical knockout over Casto Ramsey of Galion to cop the welterweight championship. Parker had Ramsey in a bad way in the second round, but failed to keep him down.

Awarded Jackets.

The new champions were presented with sport jackets and the runners-up received miniature golden gloves. Other special prizes were awarded E. McKinley for the outstanding boxer, Glover, for the quickest knockout, and Roger Doerr, Ashland manager, for the best stable. The prizes were presented by Gene Earick.

Semi-Finals.

Merle Kleinknecht, 174, Crestline, won over Jack Swartz, 175, Mansfield, decision. Phil Ganni, 152, Crestline, won over Ernest Vlock, 155, Norwalk, technical knockout second round. Ernie McKinley, 125½, Ashland, over Kid Carmel, 125, Mansfield, technical knockout 21 seconds of second round. Casto Ramsey, 141½, Galion, over Mike Embreus, 147, Ashland, dicision. Walter Kennedy, 115½, Ashland, over Norbert Kolbe, 119, Fremont, decision.

Finals

Dale Oyster, 185, Ashland, won over Jack Barlow, 183, Bucyrus, decision. Tom Clemens, 112, Mansfield, won over Frank Dolce, 99, Crestline, decision. "Curley" Miller, 128, Mansfield, won over Beauford Glover, 129½, Mansfield, decision. Ernie McKinley, 125½, Ashland, won over Salvador Duran, 123, Fremont, technical knockout, 19 seconds of 1st round. Phil Ganni, 152, Crestline, won over Pete Danhoff, 154, Willard, decision. Bob Sturzinger, 175, Sandusky, won over Merle Kleinknecht, 174, Crestline, 21 seconds of 2nd round. Melvin McKinley, 117, Ashland, won over Walter Kennedy, 115½, Ashland, decision. Frank Parker, 147½, Ashland, won over Casto Ramsey, 141, Galion, technical knockout. 1m 30s of 3rd.

Form Plans for Softball Season at 8 P. M.

A meeting of all softball managers interested in leagues for this year will be held at the Y. M. C. A. at 8 p. m. Thursday. All teams represented in leagues last season are requested to have a representative at this meeting.

The softball situation in Mansfield at the present time is somewhat muttled with the city recreation department unable to pay the umpires and buy the balls for the various leagues sponsored last year. It is the hope of the commission to iron out the difficulties and be able to get the leagues organized and underway by May 6.

Just what plan of organization will be attempted is not known at the present time according to Donald D. Cram, secretary of the softball commission. The commission will meet Thursday at 7:30 prior to the managers' meeting.

Due to the late action of the commission and complications that have made it necessary to postpone the original opening dates of the league it is imperative that all teams be represented Thursday night.

J. B. Miller, Robert Finical, C. F. Rayburn, Harold Miller and Donald Cram, make up the commission.

DOTS and dashes: Personal appearance of Gene Raymond at the Paramount in New York City next month will be the first time the theater has booked a male star on two and one half years . . . Bing Crosby's son, Gary, makes his screen debut in "Sing You Sinners." It's in a race track scene where Bing is leaning against a fence. The youngster, directly behind him, is the only child in the shot . . . There are two feminine screen stars with orchestra leader husbands now playing in Hollywood. They are Harriet (Mrs. Ozzie Nelson), and Dorothy Lamour (Mrs. Herbie Kaye).

"Battle of Broadway."

Victor McLaglen and Brian Donlevy head the cast of "Battle of Broadway," opening at the Madison theater Thursday. The two, cast as legionnaires attending the convention in New York, fight all the way through the film for a girl's love. They start out as buddies, but after they meet up with Louise Hovick it's a real rivalry. And then another male steps into the picture to win the girl's hand. How the foursome finally straighten matters out makes an interesting story. Others in the cast are Raymond Walburn, Lynn Barri and Robert Kellard. "The Girl of the Golden West," co-starring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy is the current attraction.

"Test Pilot" Held Over!

"Test Pilot," the film that brings to the screen a new angle on aviation, will be held over through Friday at the Ohio, the management announced today. The picture, with Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Myrna Loy and Lionel Barrymore in the principal roles, tells the story of a happy-go-lucky test pilot's dangerous career after he marries the girl of the dreams on the spur of the moment. Among the thrilling scenes filmed were several taken at the Cleveland air races. Miss Loy portrays Gable's wife with Tracy cast as his hard-fisted assistant. Barrymore plays the role of an aviation executive who is continually finding something wrong with Gable's flying stunts.

Wallace Beery at Majestic.

"Old Hutch," one of the current attractions at the Majestic theater, has for its leading character Wallace Beery who portrays a down-and-out father of a large family. Beery accidentally runs into a box buried on his farm containing a hundred thousand-dollar bills. He racks his brain for a way to spend the money without arousing curiosity. Finally he decides to take a job on a farm—the first time he has worked in years—but he learns that the money has been stolen from a bank. He then sets out to capture the bandits. The second feature on the program through Thursday is "Woman Against the World," with Ralph Forbes and Alice Moore.

Bennett-Grant Film.

Constance Bennett and Cary Grant grace the screen at the Ritz theater in the comedy, "Topper." The film revolves around the adventures Cosmo Topper, sedate Wall Street bank president, who is distined to take part in hilarious and ribald escapades with sundry madcap gentry of another world. The picture was adapted for the screen from a novel by Thorton Smith. Miss Bennett and Grant, as a young married couple who, upon meeting a violent death, find themselves imprisoned in spiritual space and who can only advance to a higher plane by achieving one good deed. Their idea of a good deed is reconstructing the staidly normal life of Mr. Topper "Back In Circulation," co-starring Pat O'Brien and Joan Blondell, completes the twin bill.

CITY SUED THIRD TIME BY FAMILY

Damages Totaling $41,000 Asked as Result of Fatal Accident 2 Years Ago.

Three separate damage suits totaling $41,230 as the result of the same accident had been filed in common pleas court today against the city of Mansfield.

Filed by a Cincinnati man and his son, the actions seek damages for injuries suffered by the plaintiffs and for the death of the wife of the son in a traffic mishap in June, 1936, on Lexington avenue near the edge of the city.

The latest of the suits, asking $5,640, was filed by William Willet, jr., who brought an action for $25,000 two months ago for the death of his wife in the crash.

Another suit was filed last week by Willet's father who seeks $10,590 for injuries he received as a passenger in the car.

The three petitions contend that the city was negligent in not repairing a deep rut in the street which allegedly caused the Willet car to swerve and turn over in a ditch.

The plaintiffs are represented by Attys., William F. Black of Mansfield and H C Beckner, Cincinnati.

FINALLY PAID

SALEM—(INS)—Sixteen years is a long time to wait for pay, but the McBride brothers, Joseph and James, were paid recently for work done April 5, 1922.

The brothers, now living in Ellwood City, Pa., wrote to Andrew MacLeod, secretary-treasurer of the Mullins Manufacturing company here. They had worked a half-day each on that April day 16 years ago, and now they wanted their pay.

PLEDGE TO AID RECOVERY MOVE SPURS MARKET

Advances Exceed Two Points Before Pace Slackens Near Second Hour.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market swung into a rally today but had difficulty maintaining the pace.

Opening gains of fractions to more than 2 points in leading shares were pared before the second hour after the initial wave of buying orders had been filled. Major commodities tended a little higher. Bonds were mixed.

A sizable accumulation of buying orders at the opening was attributed by brokers partly to a favorable impression made in the financial district by the signing of a pledge of co-operation with the administration to work for recovery by a group of prominent business men.

Trade observers found signs of a little improvement, mainly under the surface, in some of the more sensitive industries producing goods for the ultimate consumer.

The "Iron Age" review said sentiment in the steel industry was "somewhat better, which is partly ascribed to the fact that congress has become more assertive."

PAGEANT TELLS PIONEER STORY

2-Hour Show at Fairgrounds Monday Will Portray Birth of Northwest Territory.

Albany convention and then will follow the Capture of Ft. Sackville, Formation of the Ohio Company, Meeting of the Continental Congress, the Trek Westward, the First American Colony and others.

Members of the celebration committee have estimated that about 15,000 persons will witness the play which will be presented on a platform in front of the grandstand.

As entries continued to pour in at celebration headquarters today for participation in the parade Monday afternoon, it was predicted that the parade will be one of the most impressive ever seen in Mansfield. More than 25 floats already have been entered and indications point to the participation of at least 10 bands.

The Northwest Territory Sesqui-Centennial wooden nickels, placed on sale yesterday, captured the public fancy, committee headquarters reported, and 2,500 of the 10,000 available were distributed the first day.

Efforts were being made today to get them out to more business places in the city and county for the convenience of patrons who want them as souvenirs. Meanwhile, they may be obtained at the Chamber of Commerce.

The nickels, printed on paper-thin wood, are about the size of paper money and will be issued as change by business firms to patrons who request them. They are redeemable at five cents each before Monday night, but backers of the celebration believe many of them will be retained as souvenirs, thereby providing funds to finance the county's observance of the sesquicentennial.

CITY COLLECTION TOTALS $46,000

90 Per Cent of Water and Sewer Bills Paid as Period Ends.

With 90 per cent of the 10,000 water and sewer rental bills paid, the water and sewer department yesterday closed the west side collection with approximately $46,000 of the $52,000 billing paid, Fred E. Lingafelter, secretary of the water, sewer and garbage department, announced.

Lingafelter said that of the total collection, $35,348 represented water bills while $11,735 was sewer rental collections. He added that of the amount outstanding, approximately $4,800 was for water bills and $1,500 for sewer rental. These bills, he said, would be subject to the usual 10 per cent penalty for failure to make payment before the collection period closed.

SUIT SETTLED

Parties in $5,000 Damage Case Agree on $250 Out of Court.

Settlement of a $5,000 damage suit out of court had been effected today between Herman Potts and Joseph Monastere, both of Mansfield, with Potts authorized in probate court to accept $250 for injuries suffered by his daughter, Betty Jane Potts, 17, in a traffic accident last November.

Potts had brought the action against Monastere in common pleas court, but the case was dismissed when the defendant offered to settle for the smaller amount.

Monastere denied responsibility for the collision which involved his automobile and a taxi in which Miss Potts was a passenger.

day that it had been informed by State Welfare Director Margaret Allman that Ferd M. Pickens, business administrator for the aid for the aged division, had been made one of three officials exempt from civil service regulations in her department, as allowed by law.

Told About Petitions.

Pickens, who receives $416 66 a month, was charged in February with circulating petitions in behalf of Gov. Davey's candidacy. The commission asked the attorney general at that time whether circulation of such petitions by civil service employes violated the law. Attorney General Duffy replied that he thought the law had been violated.

Pickens was exempted from civil service regulations on April 22. Prior to that, he was a provisional appointee in a classified position.

Emmons said it was up to Duffy to decide whether Pickens should be cited for a violation.

Mrs. Allman, explaining her action, said:

"Mr. Pickens is a very valuable man for the campaign and I wanted to free him so he could speak and take part in it."

Attorney General Duffy today was to question two state officials accused of soliciting a five per cent campaign contribution from Francis C. Hooper, clerk in the sales tax division.

In a formal complaint, Hooper charged that he was asked for the contribution by Daniel S Earhart, tax commision attorney, and Mrs Florence Daily, sister of State Democratic Chairman Francis Poulson, and also employed by the tax commission.

Duffy said that he will question 100 state employes to learn whether they have been asked to contribute to the Democratic campaign fund.

Those selected by the group to draft plans for a permanent association were Earl C. Pollock, Marvin Matthes, Mack Hale, John Miller, Louis Woerth, Willis Wappner, of Mansfield, and Chris Webber of Plymouth.

Leo N. Kyawski, former Cleveland municipal judge and another member of the commission, said, "the greatest evil in the liquor business is the sale to minors"

"The liquor business in Ohio is a tremendous industry that means a great deal to the aged — we don't want to see this state go back to prohibition—the days of racketeers, chiselers, murderers, and connivers, born during that era," Kyawski said

He stressed the need for an organization of permit holders in order to protect their business from another such era that he predicted would "surely return unless the business is better conducted by the retailers themselves"

The meeting following a banquet attended by members of the state board of liquor control, district law enforcement officers and city and county officials and presided over by Common Pleas Judge C H Huston, who pledged the support of county courts "in weeding out the dead timber in the retail liquor business"

Judge Huston said that the courts were united behind such an organization to conduct business properly and protect the law abiding permit holder

Other speakers were Mayor Claude M Hunter, Municipal Judge G E Kalbfleisch Probate Judge C J Anderson County Prosecutor Glenn W Marriott, John D Marshall secretary of the Ohio Buckeye Brewers association, Henry Besanceney, assistant permit dispenser, and Assistant Attorney General Joseph P. Canary.

ROOSEVELT AND FORD CONFER

White House Luncheon Follows Pledge by Big Business to Give Government Aid.

discuss economics. It generally was understood that this broad topic included methods proposed by the president in an effort to end the recession.

Many persons also believed the question of annual wages in the automobile industry would be considered. The Ford Brotherhood, an organization of Ford employes, made such a proposal early this week, but the company's personnel chief discouraged it.

When Ford last visited the White House in November, 1929, he emerged from a conference with President Hoover to announce plans for a wage increase for his workers.

Fought Labor Board.

Ford, who opposed Mr. Roosevelt's election in 1932 and 1936, has fought compliance with orders of the National Labor Relations board, and balked at participation in the NRA automobile code.

Administration leaders, hopeful for a gesture of friendliness and co-operation from Ford, made no secret of their pleasure over the statement of the 16 big business men. It was arranged through the initiative of John W. Hanes, securities commissioner and former Wall Street broker.

The statement advised that "legislation based upon untried social and economic theories should be avoided." It carried no obligation to support any specific White House proposals, but noted that in his radio speech of April 14 "the president stated the common need and aspiration of us all —the resumption of normal industry we gather from the president's words," the 16 men agreed, "that he recognizes that we live under an industrial system in which there must be full opportunity for legitimate profits.

"This industrial system can not function unless there is continuous activity and steady production. It is the responsibility and desire of business to maintan that activity to the fullest extent commensurate with sound practices."

Nothing that the president had referred to over-production as a cause of depression, the business men stated that over-production "would be substantially alleviated if the government engages in continuous consultation with business leaders and encourages them to take the initiative to develop and stabilize their respective industries."

The statement continued:

"We pledge ourselves to aid to the full extent of our ability in such efforts of consultation and co-operation. And we heartily endorse the words of the president, 'let everyone of us work together to move the life of the nation forward'."

IF YOU OWN WHISKEY BLENDED IN THE OLD DAYS
Compare it with Crowns

Qualified experts have proved that Seagram's 5 and 7 Crown are better tasting than the famous blended whiskies of the old days

At a cost of $25 a quart, Seagram recently collected different brands of blended whiskies—famous premium whiskies of the old days... and asked its staff of qualified experts to compare them, side by side, with Crowns.

The result? Crowns were judged far superior to every single brand ...smoother, milder, better tasting.

Craftsmanship counts! For four generations the House of Seagram has been famous for the skill of its master blenders.

That's why the finer taste of Crowns is so popular today! Actually, over 129 million bottles of Crowns in all sizes have been sold since 1934.

At the bar or wherever you buy —think before you drink... say Seagram's and be sure.

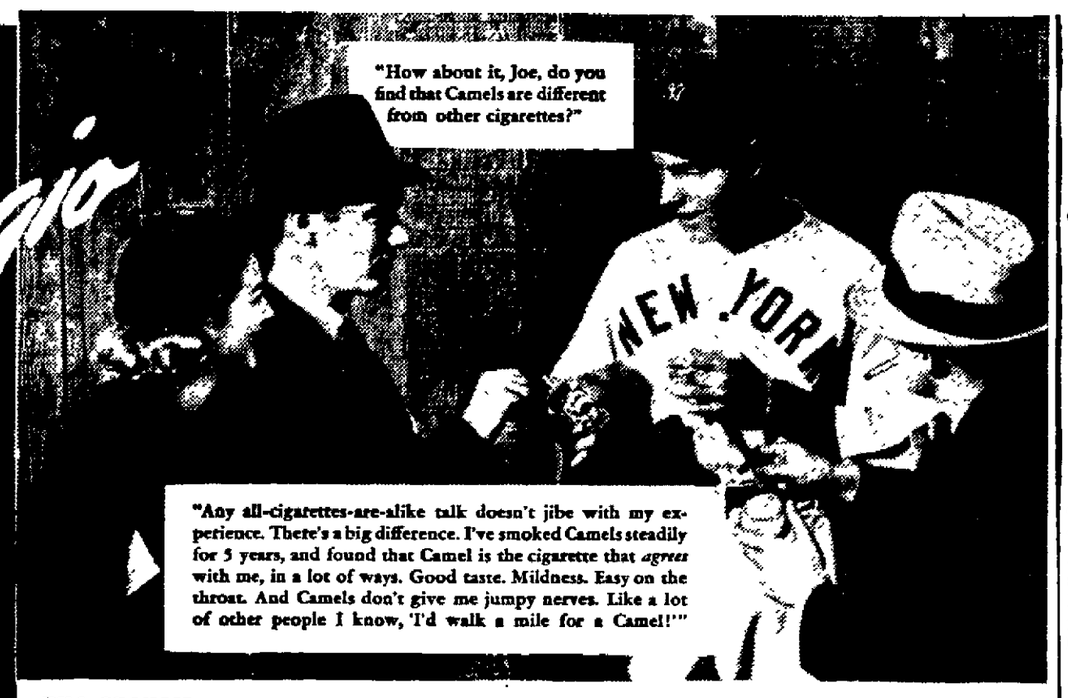
Joe DiMaggio has something to say about how different cigarettes can be!



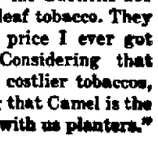
"How about it, Joe, do you find that Camels are different from other cigarettes?"
NEW YORK
"Any all-cigarettes-are-alike talk doesn't jibe with my experience. There's a big difference. I've smoked Camels steadily for 5 years, and found that Camel is the cigarette that agrees with me, in a lot of ways. Good taste. Mildness. Easy on the throat. And Camels don't give me jumpy nerves. Like a lot of other people I know, 'I'd walk a mile for a Camel!'"

BILL GRAHAM, seeing Joe DiMaggio pull out his package of Camels, asked his opinion on smoking. Joe came straight to the point: "There's a difference, a big difference, between Camels and the others." You, too, will find in Camels a matchless blend of finer, more expensive tobaccos—Turkish and Domestic.

"TOBACCO GROWERS FAVOR CAMELS FOR THEIR SMOKING!" —is the majority opinion in a survey of well-known tobacco planters

"When Camel says 'costlier tobaccos' I know it's right," says Mr. Edward Estes, capable young planter, who knows tobacco from the ground up because he grows it. "Take my last crop, for instance. Camel bought all the best parts — paid me the most I've ever gotten. The men who grow tobacco know what to smoke—Camels!"

"Last year I had the dandiest crop ever," says Mr. Roy Jones, another experienced planter who prefers Camels. "I smoke Camels because I know they bid higher and pay more at the auctions for the choice lots of leaf tobacco. They paid the highest price I ever got from anybody. Considering that Camel uses finer, costlier tobaccos, it's not surprising that Camel is the leading cigarette with us planters."



Mr. Harold Craig, too, bases his preference for Camels on what he knows about the kinds of tobaccos that go into the various cigarettes. "I get the check—so I know that Camels use more expensive tobaccos. Camel got the best of my last crop. That holds true with most planters I know too. You bet I smoke Camels."

PEOPLE DO APPRECIATE THE COSTLIER TOBACCOS IN CAMELS

THEY ARE THE LARGEST-SELLING CIGARETTE IN AMERICA

JOE KEEPS his hand in on mending nets. His family are fisher folk. DiMaggio is 6 feet tall—weighs around 185 pounds. His nerves are h-e-a-l-t-h-y!

IN THE KITCHEN of his picturesque water front restaurant, Joe says: "I eat pretty much what I like all season long and smoke Camels with my meals and afterwards, 'for digestion's sake.'" Camels are a matchless blend of finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS —Turkish and Domestic

CLOSE-UP OF JOE'S GRIP. "Ball players go for Camels in a big way," he says. "I'm a steady smoker myself. Camels have real mildness all right—don't irritate my throat."

A Farmer's Diary

By CALVIN A. BYERS

TODAY, going home, I saw along the road, a large car parked by a drive that entered a woodland. Two people sat in the front seat while three young men and a woman walked in the woods. One man had a small hatchet in his hand. All three looked admiringly at a flowering dogwood. These used to grow in great numbers in our forests, making white, lacy patterns among the larger, darker, forest trees. But they will soon be extinct.

That hatchet was an evil, hateful thing to carry in the spring and I wished I could take it from his hand. Tragedy was abroad. The hatchet man climbed the dogwood tree and when he touched this branch and that, and still some others, the man below would nod.

Finally I heard it strike near the trunk and a lovely, fan-shaped branch shivered and moved downward until its tip had touched the ground, only to be caught and torn loose. Other branches fared better until I counted five strong branches cut away; until I saw one whole side cut off, with bare arms moist with life blood flowing—a mute picture of heartless forest tragedy.

I saw the woman roam over the woods, a large handful of wild flowers, some blue and yellow violets, sweet William and Dutchman's breeches in one hand. Beyond, concealed by some leafy shrubs, I knew there nodded a colony of trilliums. I hoped with all my might she would not find them, and when I saw her move the other way I felt better and hurried home.

An hour later, while working on the lawn, I saw the car approach with dogwood branches hanging out the opened windows and the woman on the front seat with a small armful of trilliums—our only forest lilies. I know she got every one. No person will ever see these flowers grow there again.

"Hast thou loved the wood-rose—and left it on its stem?"

$546,866,000 NAVY BILL GETS ROOSEVELT OK

President Signs Measure For Huge Expenditure; Senate Debates Booster Plan.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — President Roosevelt today signed the largest navy department appropriation in peacetime history of the United States, providing $546,866,494 for U. S. fleets in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

The regular appropriation bill was signed while the senate worked slowly on the bill to authorize a 20 per cent expansion of America's fighting fleets at an eventual cost of $1,156,000,000.

Efforts of the administration to win quick action on the high authorization measure were blocked as Sen. Rush D Holt (D., W. Va.) checked an attempt to limit debate in the senate on the measure.

Agrees to Limitation.

Sen. Gerald P. Nye (R., N. D.), leader of the opposition to the naval program, had agreed to the limitation when Holt objected to the unanimous consent request of Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.)

The leadership sought to limit debate in hope of a final vote tomorrow The senate has debated the measure since April 18.

The authorization bill, however, is distinct from the measure signed today which provides $546,866,494 to supply navy department needs for the coming fiscal year. The current appropriation carries funds to lay the keels of two $70,000,000 battleships and 20 other fighting and auxiliary naval vessels

The amount, $20,323,186 greater than was appropriated for the current fiscal year, includes $138,000,000 for construction of vessels under the Vinson-Trammell act to bring the fleet to London treaty strength. Congress cut $17,539,967 from the amount recommended by the administration.

Holt's objection to limitation of debate gave the administration a temporary setback in a drive for final action on the authorization bill Acting on reports that opponents of the bill hope to force its abandonment by delaying it until it can be killed in a rush for adjournment, Barkley had hoped to dispose of the measure before the conference report on the tax bill is called up.

The senate, meeting an hour earlier than usual, was idle for 20 minutes while two quorum calls were made. At one time yesterday, debate on the bill lagged until only the speaker, the presiding officer and another senator who was reading a newspaper were on the floor.

Hits Girl Friend On Chin, Admits Assault Charge

A right to the chin of a girl friend today landed John Kalstein, 175 East Fourth street, in municipal court on a charge of assault and battery.

Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch suspended a 30-day jail sentence and a fine of $10 on the condition of future good behavior and that Kalstein pays the court costs of $6 30. The defendant pleaded guilty.

Charges were filed by Grace Leffler, whose address was not given, and who testified that Kalstein came to her apartment last night and during an argument hit her on the chin. She said that several stitches had to be taken to close the wound. She said they had been "going together" for 10 days.

Kalstein admitted that he had been drinking and when he went to the girl's home and found other friends there, he "just punched her."

Both victims identified Deitch's photograph in files at the reformatory.

Appeal to State For Funds to Keep Adario High School Open

With an organized movement under way to keep the Adario high school open, Boyd Robinson, county superintendent, and Robert Wendland, superintendent of Butler township schools, went to Columbus today to seek state aid for the school.

When the high school's first grade charter was revoked by the state department three weeks ago, it lost its right to participate in state foundation funds. Loss of the state help, it is believed, would force the Butler township board to close the high school and transport its 55 pupils to the Union district, comprising Weller and Franklin townships.

In revoking the Adario high school's charter, the state department of education gave "inadequate library books and laboratory equipment" as the reasons.

The move comes on the eve of a hearing on redistricting of the Butler and Cass township schools under the state foundation law which would close five schools in the two townships and affect about 200 pupils.

Voted late in March by the county board of education, the redistricting plan will be up for hearing at 1:30 p. m. Saturday at the courthouse.

While residents of Butler township acted to keep their schools open, the Union rural school board passed a resolution against the consolidation of other schools with the Union school unless the mergers are petitioned by the districts which would be affected.

BINGO GAME FOR 3,500 BREAKS IN PANIC AS COPPERS APPEAR

(By United Press)

NEW YORK—There are times when the law incongruously sends policemen out to start panics. On such an unhappy errand, the riot squad went last night to Arcadia hall in Brooklyn where 3,500 persons, nearly all women, were seated around bingo tables.

Most of them had husbands at home and the week's household cash in their purses Some of the husbands had conferred after they got the children to sleep, and it was they who had called the cops and made the complaint.

Inspector John O'Sullivan picked the most gentle, reassuring faces of the force, among them Detective Charles Ferguson's, and also took along a supply of rope and lots of smelling salts.

They approached the hall quietly, roped off a corral about the ticket office and lanes leading to it from the exits. Then Ferguson went inside while the emergency force deployed outside awaiting the invevitable.

No one noticed when Ferguson entered. He doffed his hat and mounted the platform.

"Ladies," he cried, "and gentlemen! There will be no more bingo."

He didn't say why, or need to There was a scraping of chairs against the floor, a few subdued outcries and the rush started. Several hundred women clogged the doorways in the first mad retreat. Once outside, their terror turned to amazement when they saw no patrol wagons and no policemen laid hands on them.

Their courage soon spread to a general clamor for their 25 cents admission back. Although O'Sullivan's men had anticipated that too, the press against the ropes and the jam at the window was overwhelming There was plenty of smelling salts for the dozen or more who swooned, and all in all, O'Sullivan said, it was a very mild panic.

NO SECRET TVA QUIZ SESSIONS, DONAHEY SAYS

Ohio Senator Declares Star Chamber Meetings 'Out' as Inquiry Gets Underway.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Senator Vic Donahey, D., O., assumed the chairmanship of the Tennessee Valley authority investigating committee today with an avowal that "there will be no star chamber sessions."

"All the dealing is going to be done above the table," said the senator. "Our sessions are going to be open and our records will be available to any one who wants to inspect them."

Donahey, Vice President Garner's choice for the chairmanship, was chosen at an informal meeting of the 10 senate and house members last night. The committee met again today to formally ratify his election and that of Rep. James M. Mead, D., N. Y. as vice chairman.

To Name Counsel.

The committee within the next few days will appoint its counsel and members of the investigating staff.

Donahey's tentative plans for procedure involve a complete audit of TVA books and a visit by the full committee to the Tennessee Valley to inspect dams and power developments. It is impossible that hearings will be started before adjournment of the present session.

The committee also expects to undertake an early inquiry into the alleged interference of private utilities with the power program.

The group will be broken up into subcommittees to handle various phases of the inquiry, according to tentative plans

Donahey reiterated his neutrality in the feud between Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, ousted TVA chairman, and the other two board members, Harcourt A. Morgan and David E. Lillentahl and promise "a full opportunity" for both sides to present their cases.

Mrs. Hahn Denied Rehearing Appeal By Supreme Court

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Anna Marie Hahn, sentenced to be electrocuted in Ohio penitentiary May 4 for the murder-by-poison of Jacob Wagner, 78, of Cincinnati, was denied a rehearing by the Ohio supreme court today on her appeal for a new trial.

The court previously had turned down her appeal on the ground that no debatable constitutional question was involved. Attorney Joseph Hoodin, one of Mrs. Hahn's counsel, in arguing for a rehearing, contended that substantial debatable questions had been presented.

Hoodin is expected to request Ohio's chief justice, Carl V. Weygandt, for permission to appeal to the United States supreme court. An appeal to the federal tribunal automatically would stay the execution.

Mrs. Hahn, who has been in the penitentiary since Dec. 1, originally was scheduled to die March 10, but the electrocution was delayed by the appeal to Ohio's highest court.

PETIT JURORS GET HOLIDAY

Panel Dismissed Until Monday as Parties in Damage Suit Reach Agreement.

Convening yesterday for the first time in the April court term, the county petit jury was halted in the middle of its deliberations over a $250 judgment suit when the attorneys in the case agreed on a settlement.

The jurors were called in and dismissed until next Monday, since nine cases on the court docket for this week were either settled or continued.

The case heard yesterday by the jury involved an action brought against E. D. Mitchell of Mansfield by Della Humphrey of near Crestline, who sought $250 on a note. Terms of settlement were not revealed.

A $10,000 damage suit charging false arrest and set for trial yesterday was also settled out of court by attorneys for the plaintiff and defendant. Terms were not made public.

In the action, Charles E. Davis, Sharon township, accused Mrs. Mae E. Ralston, Mansfield, of having him arrested last summer on a false charge of assault. Davis, a tenant on Mrs. Ralston's farm, spent several hours in the city jail after the arrest, and his case was later dismissed in municipal court.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 27, 1938

Spring poets can now tack on the last few stanzas of the masterpiece they started week before last.

It's hard for some people to understand why pump-priming should be necessary in other parts of the country.

"I wish I could afford to take a vacation this summer," he said, as he dropped another nickel into the slot machine—with a quarter bet on the side.

Clean-Up Idea Is 'Catching.'

MANSFIELD residents are being asked by Service-Safety Director Styert to join in observance of Clean-up week, starting next Monday.

While directed more particularly to a clearing out of the winter's accumulation of rubbish from homes and yards, a general spread of the "clean-up" idea could be made to bring vast improvement in the appearance of the entire city.

It has been often noted, for instance, that the painting and renovation of a single property in a neighborhood sets the pace for other needed improvements, resulting in entire sections taking on a much neater appearance.

Attractive flower gardens also have the effect of inspiring similar efforts among neighbors, until finally a whole city becomes beauty-conscious and even the so-called "slum" sections are not without their well-kept flower beds and shrubbery.

In a number of cities such organizations as the Junior Chamber of Commerce, the Boy Scouts and other groups of young people, take an active part in Clean-up week observance—which is quite appropriate, as it is these younger residents who will be the beneficiaries of the improvements now being made and who will enjoy the beauty of the shrubbery and the shade of the trees that are now planted.

Be Your Own Fire Preventer.

EVERY factory is periodically inspected for fire hazards, by men fully conversant with what to look for and what to do when dangers are discovered. You can easily do the same thing for your own home—and no rigorous course of training is necessary to fit you for it.

The great bulk of home fires originate from the simplest and most obvious hazards. Here are a few of them: Accumulations of old papers, clothing and other junk; improper storage of gasoline and other inflammable liquids; defects in heating plants and electrical appliances; uncleaned or faulty flues and furnaces; amateur repairs of electric cords and fuse boxes.

It takes no expert to quickly and effectively eliminate such hazards as these. Clean out the attic and give the junk to the junkman, storing what is left neatly in trunks and boxes. Keep paint, varnish and inflammable liquids in covered metal or glass containers—and store them well away from heat and fire. And if heating or other household appliances give trouble, local experts will be glad to repair them inexpensively.

Fire prevention isn't much of a job—a few minutes each week or so is sufficient to accomplish it.

Few Really 'Bad' Boys.

ONE of New York's three remaining probationary schools for so-called "bad boys" will be closed in September and the future of the other two is being weighed. These special schools have been receiving fewer and fewer pupils. Their operation is no longer necessary.

The reason for this change is found in the educators' new attitude toward the youthful trouble-makers. There never were as many "bad" boys as people thought. Truancy, misbehavior in school, street fighting, breaking windows, and so on, are recognized as evidence that a boy needs social help, not punishment. Instead of sending such youngsters to a school which will stigmatize them as "bad," the school authorities study their background and environment and provide a program of education for them in terms of individual needs.

Often this social service approach calls for only a few simple adjustments in the boy's life. Sometimes a longer and more detailed program is indicated. The cases of real incorrigibility are few and doubtless must be handled apart from the public school. Only shortsightedness and ignorance ever branded all troublesome children as "bad."

Danger In Badly Worn Tires.

ONE of the causes contributing to many automobile accidents is to be particularly stressed during the next few weeks—wornout tires.

Tires are so much better made nowadays, and last so much longer, that many motorists become careless about the condition of the tires on their car and do not replace them in time to assure reasonable safety.

The life of a tire depends not only on mileage but on the treatment accorded it by the user. Careful motorists will not neglect a regular check-up of the condition of tires as well as the mechanical parts of their car, and will replace worn tires before the danger point has been reached.

Another practice, too, that should be discouraged is that of selling worn-out tires to persons who apparently have no regard for their own safety, or the safety of others. Tires that fail to meet reasonable safety tests shoud be junked—in the interest of public safety.

The Time for Football.

A NEW NAME for team games and a new slant on college athletics were given by speakers at a district convention of the American Association for Health and Physical Education. Football and other team games were called "gang sports." It was urged that less emphasis be placed on them in high schools and colleges.

"Gang spirit and love of team play are dominant among sixth, seventh and eighth grade children," said one authority. "That is the age when team games hold their greatest lure. They should be granted at that age, not saved for high school or college."

The character-building values of team games—co-operation, fairness, and good sportsmanship—are important; but if the experts are right, those qualities can best be developed by playing such games at the "gang" age.

Keeping Step

—By LESLIE EICHEL

OF COURSE the world is not coming to an end. A few old men believe so—unless it is molded to suit their ends. A few old men made the Versailles "peace," you will recall.

We say this because one tired old man (with a job) felt depressed the other day....and wished for a dropping of the new.

But we believe with the young—the world still lies before us. There are reactions, of course, as at present. But the world eventually marches on.

And why do we say all this now? Because people are asking whether it is "wise" or "safe" to motor out on picnics, to enjoy oneself in the open, to go on vacations.

That reminds us of a story a German woman told. When things seemed darkest in Germany, when nobody seemed to have any money left, everybody seemed to go out into the country on a picnic at the same time. And gradually the tension eased—and Germany became a united nation. Nazi? Yes. That may be unfortunate from our way of thinking. But the United States would not become Nazi. Rather, it might sift some of the charges and countercharges, most of which are bosh (in any country) and think its way out calmly.

* * *

A GREAT TOUR YEAR.

At any rate, this summer promises to be the greatest touring season on record. And there are likely to be more picnics than ever.

Now, a people that travels up and down its own land, seeing other folk and things first hand, is not likely to be led astray by alarums.

Thus, at the autumn elections the voters may know a great deal more concerning the state of the nation than do the politicians.

* * *

THANKS TO F. D. R.

People generally are opposed to spending just for spending's sake. (Except those, of course, who otherwise would starve unless the government aided them.)

But folk who tour the country in autos speak highly of President Roosevelt's spending for roads, bridges, CCC camps, public parks, power and conservation dams, tree planting, flood prevention, sewer building and a hundred other improvements.

One motorist and his wife who traveled 6,000 miles told us: "You have to see it to realize the good that is being done."

And when half the population is on wheels, SEEING it, such improvements are likely to continue. It is because of the motor tourist that America is being rebuilt.

* * *

TAKE IT!

As for a vacation—of course, take it. You will get new ideas, and with new ideas, maybe a better job.

But, of course, don't spend all you have. It never is wise to do that.

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Seventy-three Richland county young men entrained for Camp Sherman as first increment of second national draft.

George P. Beck, 64, died.

Richland county won honor flag by passing Liberty Loan quota of more than a million dollars.

Divorce case was regarded as "unusual" because because both parties were college graduates.

Five-year-old Richard Oberlin, riding on ice wagon, was injured when horses ran away.

County Commissioner William Spohn sustained broken leg when thrown from buggy when horse kicked.

FIVE YEARS AGO TODAY

Thursday, April 27, 1933.

Rev. Percy Yett, South American missionary, was the speaker at First Brethren church.

Osborne Meese and Walter Willis were in Toledo as delegates to the district conference of Rotary International.

Announcement was made of the marriage of Miss Lydia Miller and John Brunn, both of Mansfield.

Two new patrol cars delivered to police department were christened "Lizzie" and "Annie."

A truck driven by William Cunningham and a car operated by Elmer Diller, collided and were damaged.

Police Chief William Lauer refused Mansfield groups permission to meet in Central park for May day demonstration.

It Was Once Said:

"Wealth brings with it its own checks and balances. The basis of political economy is non-interference. The only safe rule is found in the self-adjusting meter of demand and supply. Do not legislate. Meddle, and you snap the sinews with your sumptuary laws. Give no bounties, make equal laws, secure life and property, and you need not give alms. Open the doors of opportunity to talent and virtue and they will do themselves justice, and property will not be in bad hands. In a free and just commonwealth, property rushes from the idle and imbecile, to the industrious, brave and persevering."

La Follette Criticism Creates Stir

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Governor (of Wisconsin) Philip F. La Follette's recent references to Rooseveltian methods as a policy of "tinkering and patching" created a sensation in Washington which shows no signs of subsiding.

Plenty of other critics have said substantially the same thing, to be sure.

"Young Phil" created all the ensuing excitement not so much because of what he said as because of the fact that it was he who said it—in a radio broadcast from Madison, the Badger State capital. And then he called a conference of liberals to assemble in Madison, April 28, as a possible forerunner of a new national third party.

* * *

NOT AN EX-PROGRESSIVE

Republicans generally and many conservative Democrats have found unlimited fault with New Deal activities without attracting much attention; it was taken for granted that they would do so.

Some formally recognized liberals—even radicals—like Senators Hiram W. Johnson of California and Burton K. Wheeler of Montana also have been fault-finders, but New Dealers have taken the position that these statesmen have turned reactionary; they have referred to them as ex-liberals.

Governor La Follette, however, cannot very convincingly be termed an ex-Progressive.

* * *

GOVERNOR'S POSITION

"Young Phil" made it extremely clear that he approves the New Deal's objectives, but has an exceedingly poor opinion of New Dealerism's experimental starts toward arriving at them. He is, in short, more practically advanced that New Dealerism is. He wants to GET somewhere.

Naturally conservatism liked his talk. It doesn't favor HIS objectives, either, but it deems his remarks calculated, momentarily, to damage the New Deal, which, right now, conservatism is fighting. No matter as to the future, conservatives argue; at this particular juncture their side could not have picked a more effective spokesman than "young Phil" La Follette.

The so-called ex-liberals, in Senators Johnson's and Wheeler's class, equally are rejoiced. The governor stated their case better than they have yet succeeded in stating it for themselves.

Even Rooseveltians cannot conveniently repudiate "young Phil."

* * *

A DRAMATIC ELEMENT

A peculiarly dramatic element enters into the situation, too, from the circumstances that "Phil's" own brother, Senator "young Bob" La Follette, has been one of the New Deal's most enthusiastic supporters.

Both he and "Phil" are unquestioned Progressives (spelled either with a big or a little "P"), but "Bob" seemingly is a Rooseveltian as to methods as well as objectives. It is obvious that "Phil" is "off the reservation" as to methods—for the current depression, he asserts, could have been prevented by a "carefully worked-out program."

"Phil" charges specifically that the job has been bungled—a job with which "Bob" has been identified prominently.

* * *

TO RUN FOR SENATE?

Does this imply a split in the La Follette family?

Or is "young Bob" turning cold New Dealerishly? He hasn't told yet.

Washington is wondering:

Does "Phil" plan to run for the senate?

The term of Democratic Senator F. Ryan Duffy of Wisconsin is just expiring. "Phil" could run against him as a Progressive in November ,and maybe beat him.

"Bob" has a couple more years to serve.

It would be unique to have brothers from the same state simultaneously in the senate—especially with "young Phil" as more of a Progressive than "young Bob" is.

* * *

MENTIONED FOR PRESIDENT

Indeed, "young Phil" is presidentially mentioned.

Ordinarily, when a presidential possibility is suggested, the question is raised, "Isn't he too old?" As to "Phil" it might be asked, "Isn't he too young?" He is only a bit past 40.

Still, he has his availability.

He certainly would fill the bill as a liberal candidate, regardless of party label—and the label may not signify much next time.

* * *

RESENTFUL?

The Roosevelt administration has been pro-Democratic in Wisconsin.

The La Follette machine (Progressive) has been pro-New Deal. It probably considered itself entitled to New Deal backing. It hasn't had it; the administration has boosted for Democratic candidates versus La Follette Progressives.

Maybe La Follette-ism is resentful.

These considerations count in politics.

Timely Editorial

Too Soon To Say.

Approach to knowledge of the life principle appears to have been made by Dr. Alexis Carrel, co-operating with Col. Charles A. Lindbergh in experiments with the so-called robot heart. Organs of the human body, hearts, lungs, arteries, various glands, have retained their vitality and continued their functioning though completely separated from the original body to which they belonged.

Vivid imaginations, stimulated by such announcements, speculate on all sorts of bizarre results as science progresses. In the fanciful realm of May-be are created factories for turning out full-fledged human beings. How simple the process appears! The human body in its essentials consists of well-known chemical elements, carbon, hydrogen, calcium, iron and others. Why not an assembly line producing generations to order, with new models brought out periodically as defects are proved and improvements are designed?

But the true scientist makes no such wild guesses. Dr. Carrel, questioned concerning certain logical uses for the new discovery, says, "It is too soon to say." Those who know most, realize how small is the island of knowledge in the vast ocean of the unknown.—Detroit News.

What It Means:

De-Sterilization of Gold.

—By MORGAN M. BEATTY

WASHINGTON—De-sterilization of gold has become a fact. It has enabled the federal reserve banks to plank down a $1,400,000,000 roll at the cashiers' windows, all ready and waiting for reliable borrowers—if they want it.

Maybe you have wondered, as I did, whether that was a sort of sleight of hand trick, to produce nearly a billion and a half dollars where none was apparent before.

Fact is, sterilization and de-sterilization of gold is a trick. It's a gadget invented by the U. S. treasury and federal reserve system to meet some of the strange new money problems created by the 1929 depression.

That depression forced all nations of the world — including America—off the gold standard.

But gold standard or no gold standard, America still seemed the safest place in the world for money. A steady flow of money to America forced additional gold deposits into American vaults. And every bit of gold currency that arrived from abroad went into the U. S. treasury because the law says no private individual may own gold in America. Result: the treasury today has $12,000,000,000 worth—half the world's supply.

* * *

Now It's Sterilized

AS GOLD arrived, the treasury paid for it by issuing currency. Each dollar's worth was good for a dollar bill. The bill, deposited in a federal reserve bank, became the base for added credit. For by law and custom banks may lend five, 10 or even 20 times their original deposits.

In other words, a million dollars in bank deposits might be the base for 20 millions in loans.

The availability of all that credit was fine while the depression was deep. But recovery set in. Demand for loans picked up.

The treasury got worried. What would happen, it wondered, if all that foreign gold should be withdrawn suddenly and all those loans had to be repaid at once? Wouldn't there be a panic?

So the experts sought a way to keep additional gold from becoming the basis for additional credit.

Sterilization was applied as the way out.

Thereafter, when foreign gold arrived at the treasury, no new currency was issued to pay for it. Instead, for $100 worth of gold, the treasury issued a $100 bond. This went back to the bank just as currency would, but ordinarily it did not become the basis for credit.

In a couple of years, the treasury had issued $1,400,000,000 of these bonds against "sterilized" gold. The credit base had not been increased.

* * *

Now It Isn't.

ALL this was happening during 1935, 1936 and 1937 when banks were putting out more loans, businessmen were borrowing and things looked like a boom.

Then came the recession. Borrowing dropped off. Business slackened.

When it had lasted until April this year, the administration thought it would be a good idea to invite business to borrow.

And so, de-sterilization.

In effect, the treasury took back the gold bonds it had put in the banks and issued currency in their place. That currency, unlike the bonds, can be used as a credit base. The banks find themselves with a lot of loanable credits on hand. The idea is that they will be very glad to lend this money because otherwise it will lie idle and profitless. With so much money available, businessmen should be tempted to borrow.

Whether it all works out remains to be seen. The treasury has led business to money; can it make it borrow?

What if the foreigner should ask for his gold? The answer of the experts is that there are so few loans out against the credit base that it could absorb most any shock right now.

What's Your Value As a Person Or As a Patriot?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

THEY'RE going American in a big way in Dubuque, Iowa, schools. Not just telling the youngsters Adventure Tales or teaching them to babble patriotic phrases. But making them decide, for themselves, what Americanism means, what it demands, what it costs—RIGHT NOW, TODAY—in terms of human sacrifice and service, sweat, tears, blood, prayers and hard cash. And whether they, as future citizens, have what it takes to be an American.

Here, for example, comes young Marjorie Herrmann, 9B Civics Committee Member, Jefferson Intermediate School, Dubuque, Iowa—with details. Says Marjorie:

"In our ninth grade civics class we are studying 'School Citizenship.' In this unit we are trying to learn about good and bad habits of pupils in our school . . . of the problems facing our school and, judging by these, how a modern city solves its problems. Our class has decided to determine the things that are causing troubles in citizenship. We would like to know your opinion of some good habits pupils should form in school."

A modern youngster's school quiz—questions a child of twelve is supposed to answer. But why limit them to 9B Civics?

HOW ABOUT APPLYING THEM TO YOURSELF?

What does Americanism mean to YOU?

What do YOU mean to America? What do YOU give to America?

You're told to be "patriotic." But what is your idea of patriotism? Fighting in front line trenches in France? Traveling in Covered Wagon Trails? Joining clubs? Ranting from soap boxes or radios? Lobbying bills through congress? No—these are not proofs of patriotism . . . these are not the measure of your worth to your country.

PRIVATE PERFORMANCE . . . THAT'S THE PROOF.

You are as great an American as you are an individual—no more nor less. You are as valuable, as wise and strong and loyal, as a citizen, as you are wise, strong and loyal as a private individual. You may know all the Fourth of July phrases and be first in the flag waving . . . BUT UNLESS YOU ARE A BRAVE, INTELLIGENT AND CONTROLLED PERSON YOU AREN'T WORTH A HOOT TO THESE UNITED STATES.

And that's why these schools in Dubuque, Iowa, are doing a big and valuable job. They are beginning at the right end . . . not with the registered voter but with the private individual. They are teaching the children that AMERICANISM BEGINS AT HOME . . . IN THE PERSONALITY AND DAILY PERFORMANCE OF EACH BUDDING CITIZEN.

You wonder, whether you're thirteen or thirty, what part you'll play in public life. The answer's easy. You'll play as big a part as you play in private life. You'll be as useful to America as you are to yourself.

How do you take your problems as they come day by day? Do you take them realistically, face them bravely, with all their disturbing, disrupting challenges? Do you make adjustments as they are needed, pushing on and on?

Or do you try to escape from reality . . . ducking away into day dreams, sentimentality, intolerance, self pity and prejudice? Are you long on alibis but short on action? If so, your "patriotism" won't be worth the Hot Air it consumes.

These are questions which affect all America today . . . questions which will determine the progressive life or speedy death of America. You may be only a ninth grade youngster in some grammar school, or you may be the head of a vast business, the governor of one of our biggest states. Whatever you are, your reaction to these questions will make or break your country.

If you're a straight-thinking, hard-hitting, square-shooting individual, you'll SAVE America!

BUT IF YOU'RE A DODGER AND A DAY DREAMER . . . A POSER AND A SENTIMENTALIST — YOU'RE AS MUCH A TRAITOR TO YOURSELF AND YOUR COUNTRY AS ANY AARON BURR!

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

Limousine—From "Cloak."

Limousine, which is the designation of a special type of automobile body with which we are all familiar, derives from Limousin, historic Province in Central France, famed of old for its chinaware and enamel industry, and whose dialect, today a barely comprehensible patois, was in former times considered the purest form of Provencal.

More directly, after the Province of Limousin, we have the identical French word which was applied originally to a style of hood or cloak which at the time of its introduction became quite fashionable.

It was from this that the early limousine was named; for it was a carriage whose driver was separated by a partitioned compartment from the passenger, who was deemed protected as though by a cloak.

Contests—A Warning.

From "Tickets to Fortune, the Story of Sweepstakes, Lotteries and Contests," by Eric Bender; (Modern Age Books).

What chance has the average person of winning in an important contest?

No chance whatever!

We have seen that most of the competitors are not even alert enough to abide by the rules. They can never even hope to have their entries read. . . . But suppose that you are capable of producing a worthwhile entry. Suppose that it passes the preliminary tests. Now what are your chances?

No better than they were at first for at this point you are competing with the professional contests answerers.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—This is an incredible story. It is almost too melodramatic to be true. But it has been verified. And it happened in New York, to real, live people. It is not just something an imaginative fiction writer thought up:

One day a young man presented himself before the head of one of New York's smartest jewelry houses. "I have here a very unusual pearl," he said, "and I am anxious to get another to match it, for my wife. I got this in India last September."

The jeweler took the pearl and examined it carefully. It was indeed a curious stone. "I never saw one just like this," the gem expert admitted.

"Yes," said the young man. "That's why I want another to match it. My wife is crazy about it, and I want its twin for her birthday."

* * *

AGAIN the specialist examined the pearl. It was black and in the center was a small crescent, just like an eye. "I can't promise you anything: but we'll try. How much will you pay for it?"

"Oh, I don't know—I picked that up for a song, for $2,000. I'll go as much as $5,000, if it's a duplicate of this one."

So the young man gave his address, his references, and went away. Meanwhile, this world famous house instructed its agents here and abroad to search for a black pearl with a tiny crescent eye.

Weeks went by. Then one day the man called: "Any luck?" . . .

"Nothing yet," was the reply, "but we are leaving nothing unturned."

And, like that, they met with success. Brilliant success. "We have it," cried the jeweler into the transmitter. "Our agent in Cairo found the perfect match—same weight, same crescent. It is the twin of the pearl you own."

The young man was frankly delighted. "Marvelous," he exulted. "Marvelous! When may I have it?"

"In about three weeks, I think." . . . "And what is this going to cost me?" demanded the excited client.

"That's just it," said the jeweler, "it's a steep price, but we are unable to do any better. The owner demands $15,000." . . . "Whew!" whistled the purchaser. "That's a lot of money. Still, it's for my wife, and she shall have it. It's a deal."

Wherefore the jeweler cabled his representatives in Cairo to close the deal at once and forward the pearl. Seventeen days later it arrived.

* * *

BUT when the triumphant jeweler telephoned his client that good man could not be found. They ransacked New York without success. It was as if the earth had simply swallowed him.

And then the jeweler began studying that pearl. And weighing it. And, finally, he realized that this pearl with the crescent eye, this 'twin,' was the same pearl that the young man had brought in months before. He realized also that he had been fleeced, for though the pearl was genuine, his agents had paid $15,000 to the young "husband's" confederates in Cairo. And the pearl itself was worth about $4,500.

MR. ZERO + + +

By PATRICIA WENTWORTH

(Copyright 1936)

CHAPTER XXIII.

"It took me four and a half minutes this morning. It might take anything from five to seven or eight minutes in the dark. It might take no more than four for a man who had a torch—and knew his way—and was in a hurry to get there."

Algy laughed.

"In other words, you mean Mr. Zero might have done it in four minutes. But then why should Mr. Zero have been in a hurry?"

"We should be interested to know that," said Mr. Brook. "Perhaps you will answer your own question."

"I'm afraid only Mr. Zero could do that," said Algy.

There was a momentary silence—rather a concentrated sort of silence. It said, with no need for words, "Well, here you are—the game's up. Why not make a clean breast of it?"

* * *

The silence was broken by Mr. Brook.

"Lady Colesborough says she heard the clock strike twelve just before she left her room. I have ascertained that this clock is five minutes fast. It was therefore six or seven minutes past twelve before she left the house. That would allow Mr. Zero six or seven minutes to arrive at the rendezvous before she got there."

"But you don't know when Mr. Zero started, or where he was coming from—do you?" said Algy.

"Don't we?" said Mr. Brook. "I wonder. But we know when you started, Mr. Somers. You could easily have reached the rendezvous before Lady Colesborough got there."

Algy contemplated him with amazement.

"I'm afraid that doesn't help you very much."

"No? Well, we shall see. Meanwhile here is a provincial timetable. Eleven fifty eight Miss Hardwicke enters the drive. Twelve o'clock, Mr. Somers enters the drive; Lady Colesborough prepares to leave her room. Twelve to twelve five. Lady Colesborough leaves the house by the parlor door; Sir Francis follows her. Twelve fifteen Mr. Zero arrives at the rendezvous. Twelve seven Lady Colesborough arrives at the rendezvous. Twelve eight to twelve nine Sir Francis gets there after skirting the rose garden. Twelve ten Sir Francis is shot. Twelve eleven Miss Hardwicke arrives and finds Lady Colesborough holding the pistol. The butler Sturrock says it was just after a quarter past twelve when the alarm-bell rang and aroused the servants' wing."

"Quite so," said Algy. "May I point out, however, that your timetable rests chiefly on guess work. Miss Hardwicke and I can corroborate each other as to the time she left the car, and Sturrock's evidence as to the time the alarm-bell rang probably has the support of the rest of the staff, but between twelve and twelve fifteen you're just guessing, and you know it. It's no use asking anyone who has ever met Lady Colesborough to expect her to be accurate about time. If she said she heard a clock strike just before she left her room, it might have been one minute before or it might have been ten—I don't suppose she'd notice the difference." He turned to Colonel Anstruther. "You've been talking to her, sir. Would you expect her to be accurate—well, about anything?"

"Woman's a half-wit," said Colonel Anstruther. "Hasn't got a mind, and doesn't try to use whatever it is she's got instead. I'll give you that if it's any use to you, Mr. Somers—you'll want all you can get. Any more questions, Mr. Brook?"

Mr. Brook shook his head.

* * *

Algy left the three inspectors and went to Gay who was in the drawing room.

Standing side by side, they looked out one of the straight and rather narrow drawing-room windows at the lawn where they groped in the dark, and the black mouth of the tunnel down which they had to run to find a murdered man.

"When are we going to get away from this horrible place, Algy?" Gay finally broke their silence.

Algy smiled.

"I don't know, my child—when they've made up their minds whether to arrest me at once or wait for the inquest. You'll have to stay for the inquest anyhow, I'm afraid, but you'll be able to go as soon as it's over. If I'm not figuring as the accused by then, I shall be able to go, too—we might even go together."

Gay swung round with a bright color in her cheeks.

"Then don't—they can't!"

Algy saw the color out of the tail of his eye, and avoided looking at it.

"Oh, they're quite sure that I am Mr. Zero, and that I shot Sir Francis. The only thing they're not sure about is whether they've got enough evidence to put before a jury. I don't think they have myself, but if they do, they'll be three to one, and I shall be for it."

Gay's hand kept slipping inside his arm, tugging at his sleeve.

"Don't! Don't say it! Algy, please don't say it."

He was aware of her looking over her shoulder as if she expected the immediate entry of the inspector. He turned to her then with half a laugh.

"They'll wait till the safe has been opened anyhow. Mr. Paterson, the Colesborough family solicitor, is coming down to be present. Stuffy old boy. Furious at being called out on a Sunday, and ready to have apoplexy at the idea of their proceeding without him. I could hear old Anstruther fairly booming at him on the telephone—and getting as good as he gave, I should say. I was the other side of the hall or I might have heard Paterson too. The study door was ajar and they were at it hammer and tongs. In the upshot, I gathered that Paterson would be here in time for tea—another jolly, companionable meal."

Gay's hand was warm against his arm, against his side. It shook a little as she said, "What's in the safe?"

"Something that'll show them I'm not Mr. Zero, I hope, but you never can tell."

"If there's anything, it'll be here," said Gay. "Sylvia swears there wasn't any papers in the town safe, only the letters she took. I told them that, and they asked her and she stuck to it. So if there's anything to find, it'll be here."

"Monty will probably blow in some time," said Algy. "He's staying with the other Wessex-Gardners, the one they call Binks, only about five miles from here. Maud Lushington and Constance Wessex-Gardners are sisters." He laughed a little. "He takes the wretched Brewster down and makes him work like a galley slave. The funny thing is that Brewster likes it. He told me once in a hushed voice that it was a privilege which he appreciated very highly, and he rather gave me up as a lost soul when I said he could keep it as far as I was concerned. Of course, he's the perfect secretary and I'm not. I'd much rather be doing something on my own."

Gay's hand pulled at his arm.

"Algy — will Mr. Lushington stand up for you?"

"He's been a brick so far," but—well, he's got to be careful. If I wasn't his cousin, it would make it a lot easier for him to take my part."

Gay pressed closer.

"It's going to be all right, Algy, say it's going to be all right!"

* * *

Algy looked out at the yew walk.

"It's going to be as right as rain, my dear."

"Then why won't you look at me?"

"Because I think I'd better not, Gay."

She said, "Why?" and only just managed to get the word to make any sound at all. The sound was so small that Algy did not feel obliged to take any notice of it. He made instead a movement to release himself, but in doing so he found Gay's upturned face much, much nearer than he expected. It was on a level with his shoulder, the eyes very bright and intent, cheeks glowing and lips just parted on that trembling word.

They looked at each other, and he said, "My dear—I mustn't — now—"

Gay said "Why?" again. This time it was only a breath like a sigh, but it came from her very heart. She had both hands clasped about his arm, and he was trying to unclasp them.

He said, "You know why."

"I don't care," said Gay. "I don't care a bit what anyone thinks, and I don't care if they arrest you. I don't care about anything unless—unless you don't care for me."

There was a dreadful little pause. Her clasp relaxed. She stepped back, her eyes suddenly blurred so much that she couldn't see. In a forlorn and faltering tone she said, "You don't. It—it doesn't matter if you don't, Algy."

She blinked away two blinding tears. Having got her hand, Algy was holding it so tight that it felt as if all the bones were breaking. This was naturally very encouraging, but just as she managed to swallow a sob that was threatening to choke her the comforting pressure ceased. She had her hand again, rather the worse for wear, and Algy Somers had reached the door and banged it behind him.

Gay dried her eyes, and presently went upstairs to Sylvia.

Sylvia was lying on the old-fashioned couch in her room. She looked pale and depressed, but she brightened up when Gay came in.

"Are they still asking everybody questions?" she said in a plaintive voice. "Will they go away soon, do you think?"

"I don't know," said Gay. Her heart felt like a heavy stone inside her and her throat was dry.

Sylvia sighed. "It would be nice if they would go away, wouldn't it? I don't mind Algy—he's nice, but I wish the Inspector would go away, and that Mr. Brook and Colonel Anstruther. Why did they want to ask me all those questions? It isn't as if they could possibly think that I shot Francis." She shivered, and her voice had a frightened sound. "They couldn't think that—Gay, they couldn't! They kept wanting to know why I picked up the pistol. And I don't know. It was all so quick and so dreadful. But they can't think I did it. Why, you were there, and Algy. Why couldn't it have been Algy?"

"Sylvia!"

"I mean, why don't they think it was Algy?"

"They do," said Gay, and felt a cold breath of terror touch her and go past.

Sylvia said, "Oh," and then, "What a good thing."

"Sylvia!"

"You needn't say 'Sylvia!' like that. I mean, if they think it was Algy they won't go on thinking it was me, will they, darling? And then they won't go on asking me all those silly questions."

Bright anger looked out of Gay's eyes, but it faded again.

She said, "Sylly, don't you truly remember how you came to have the pistol? Let's go over it together and see if it doesn't come back to you. What was the first thing that happened when you got to the window in the hedge?"

"I had my torch," said Sylvia, "and the light went through the window, and Mr. Zero said, 'Is that you?' and I said, 'Yes.' And he said, 'Have you got those letters?' and I said I had, and he asked if I'd looked at them and I said, of course, I hadn't. I mean, why should I—horrid things. But he went on about was I sure I hadn't, and I said, 'Don't be silly.' And then he said, 'Hand them over quick and put out that torch!' I think he said 'that damned torch.' And I wanted to know why, and he got angry and said, 'Put it out at once, I tell you.' And then Francis came running, and there was a fight, and the pistol went off and I picked it up."

"Sylly, how could you pick it up when they were on one side of the hedge and you were on the other?"

Sylvia stared with those blue eyes of hers.

"He shot Francis, and he threw it down and I picked it up?"

"You mean he threw it in at the window? Is that what you mean?"

"I suppose so," said Sylvia in a helpless voice. "Yes," that's what he must have done, because something hit my shoulder and made a bruise there. I expect it was the pistol."

"Did you tell Colonel Anstruther that?"

"Oh, no, darling," said Sylvia. "I've only just thought about it myself."

"You must tell him," said Gay. "Now, Sylly—think!" What happened to the letters?"

"I don't know, darling."

"Just think. Did you give them to Mr. Zero? You say he told you to, but did you do it? Did you?"

"If I'd given them to him I wouldn't remember crunching them up in my hand when they were fighting, would I?"

"I shouldn't think so. Is that what you remember?"

* * *

The telephone bell rang from the table beside the big four-post bed. Sylvia got up as if she were glad of the interruption. She put the receiver to her ear, and heard a voice which set her heart knocking against her side.

"You know who is speaking, Lady Colesborough."

Sylvia said, "DO I?" And then panic took her, and she added in a choking hurry, "Yes, yes, yes—of course I do. What do you want?"

The voice said, "I want those letters. Where are they?"

"I don't know. Everyone asks me that, and I don't know."

"The police haven't got them?" Mr Zero's voice was smooth.

Sylvia said "Oh, no. Oh, I'm sure they haven't, because they keep asking me—everyone does."

"And what do you say?"

"I don't know," said Sylvia. "I mean, that's what I say, but I don't know."

"Keep right on saying it," said Mr. Zero, and rang off.

Sylvia, turning round with an expression of relief, was met by a demanding look from Gay and a quick "Who was that?" The relief faded.

"He wanted to know about the letters too. I told him I didn't know."

"Sylly, who was it Who were you speaking to? Who asked you about the letters?"

"It was Mr. Zero," said Sylvia. Her voice began confidently and then shook. It shook most on the name.

"Mr. Zero!"

Gay had a startled look.

"You ought to tell them at once. They ought to find otu where the call came from."

But Sylvia shook her head.

"Oh, no," she said.

"Sylly!"

"He wouldn't like it at all," said Sylvia with conviction.

Gay looked, opened her mouth to speak, shut it again, and ran out of the room downstairs and into the study. The three officers who were there all turned to look at her.

She stood with the open door in her hand and said, with the words tripping over each other, "He's just called her up! He's been talking to her—on the telephone—Mr. Zero! So it couldn't be Algy—you must see that it couldn't be Algy if he's just been talking to Sylvia on the telephone!"

Colonel Anstruther said, "Bless my soul!" and Mr. Brook said, "Won't you please come in and shut the door, Miss Hardwicke, and sit down and tell us what you mean?"

Better Homes In 1938 Manner-Here's What You Need

Cool Comfort Key Of Summer Styles

Special Displays In Mansfield Stores Show Home Furnishings For Better Living—Both Indoors and Out.

Let's turn the house inside out for summer! Current conditions are proving that home furnishings are one of the really worthwhile investments of the day, and in the stores of Mansfield you'll find hundreds of opportunities for better living, in the 1938 manner—both indoors and out. Special style reviews are to be seen here based on purchase made for the current seasonal event.

Whether it be porch or garden furniture, electric refrigeration, floor coverings, furniture for living room, dining room or bedroom in town—or the cottage at lake, mountains or shore—there are new and delightful items around which you may plan your own cool comfort—and the entertainment of your guests as well.

Wide Selection Available.

While you may not need a glider immediately, for instance, it is wise to have one put aside for you — now — while selections are fresh, and stocks complete. The same is true of fiber rugs. When house-cleaning time comes around you'll find those odd occasional pieces that you need—a table, a chair—will make all the difference in the world in transforming an otherwise stodgy room into something satisfactory.

To those who are interested in spreading employment — at the present time—it might be interesting to know that the production and sale of just one chair selling at say $50, gives employment to nearly fifty persons, who take anywhere from a minute or two to a day to put their labor and creative skill into it. A chair is made of wood—(the frame)—which gives the woodsman and the hardwood mills some work. Then there are springs, which may be traced from the iron mine, to the steel mill, and thence to the wire plant. There's upholstery fabric and stuffing—with a base of animal or vegetable yarns, with all the steps involved.

In the furniture factory the frame may be assembled in an hour or two; the springs or filling installed in the same time, then an upholsterer goes to work—spending anywhere from three to six hours in creating a tailored appearance, and a lasting comfort. The finishing room, the advertising and selling of manufacturer and merchant—plus the freight and delivery—all have their angles employing labor.

And despite all these steps prices of furniture are less costly than most other commodities, due to improved plant efficiency—a depression necessity which has worked to the advantage of the consumer. Since 1933 furniture prices have risen less in proportion than most items of a similar nature, and prices have been stabilized to a great degree for nearly a year

Painting Makes For Better Homes

The painting of both the interior and exterior of a home is one of the many ways in which to make it one of the better residences in a community.

The Schmidt and Peat Hardware store, 349 Bowman street, Mansfield's largest neighborhood hardware store, is one of the largest dealers in paints and varnishes in the city, handling several well known brands. The store is also exclusive agent in the city for "Kyanize" paints, varnishes and enamels

For those who are planning to beautify their yards, the store also maintains a complete department of bulk garden seeds, fertilizers, grass seeds and garden tools.

For the convenience of its customers who wish to shop in the evening, the store is open every day until 8 p. m., and until 9 p. m. on Saturday. A large parking lot adjoins the store.

'Hideaway Room' Makes a Home More Livable

Consider the modern trend toward a hideaway room in your home as a practical means of making the home livable and keeping the family members contented.

This type of room is precisely what its name indicates, only it is a hideaway for family members—not for discarded pieces of furniture, old pictures, trunks and boxes.

Sensible economy of space is putting storage areas in the wall, and in this way salvaging an extra room for living purposes. Such a room can be a cross between a den, a study, a library, a music or sewing room—and always, of course, an extra bedroom if the need for it arises.

If it is a little remote from the rest of the house it offers a retreat for different family members when the living room is given over to entertaining, and the dining room and kitchen centers of busy activity.

It can have a desk for dad when he brings home papers and work from the office, and adequate shelves for books, with a small radio neatly tucked away somewhere in their midst. It also should have storage space for games and a place for phonograph and records.

And of course, some type of couch or day bed so that when the bedrooms overflow, there's always a place for one added person to sleep.

BETTER QUALITIES BEST

Important thing to remember in buying your new rug is that the different weaves of rugs, such as axminster, wilton, velvet and chenille, are each produced in varying qualities. A good guidepost to these qualities is the price. In carpets and rugs you get what you pay for. Better qualities are in real demand these days.

Setting Like This For Summer of 1938

The versatility of metal for creating attractive summer furniture is portrayed in this graceful "Deauville" ensemble. The comfortable chairs are made of flat metal stripping, finished in sparkling white enamel. The oval table supplies a perfect complement, the glass top revealing a plant stand constructed in the base. The interesting two-decker "air conditioned" umbrella shown in the background employs buggy fringe for a new decorative note.

G. E. Range Helps Lighten Day's Tasks

With a woman's duties in the modern home centered in the kitchen, it is only natural for the housewife to look towards modern conveniences to lighten the day's tasks.

With this thought in mind, General Electric, a pioneer in the manufacture of electric ranges, offers to the housewife a completely new modern electric range.

Today the latest model includes many new improvements such as Tel-a-coop lights, the select-a-speed unit, triple oven with streamlined corners and shelf supports, and a new easy to operate automatic oven timer with built in minute chime and pilot light.

The heart of the electric range is the cooking unit and for this reason buyers insist on hi-speed calrod, the unit proved by time and laboratory tests, to be durable, efficient and economical.

The new 1938 General Electric range is now on display at the Richland Electric company, 14 North Diamond street, distributors for General Electric products in Mansfield and Richland county.

Cushions Help Preserve Fine Floor Coverings

A fine American-made wool pile carpet or rug is a real investment, and deserves reasonable care if it is to give the best service The use of rug cushions will increase the longevity of a rug or carpet, particularly where it is subjected to severe wear conditions Cleanliness is essential both to appearance and durability.

In a much-used room the vacuum cleaner may be used every day Or a carpet sweeper can be used daily, and a vacuum cleaned once or twice a week

For periodic cleaning carpets and rugs should be entrusted to reliable professional cleaners There are many types of soil which require special consideration, and professional cleaners are acquainted with the peculiarities of different types of construction weaves and dyes Authoritative information on the subject of care and maintenance of rugs and carpets has recently been exhaustively treated in a booklet for household and professional cleaning by the Institute of Carpet Manufacturers

Superstitions of Europeans Play Part In Cleaning

While the housewife gathers up her soaps and brushes and electrical household helps in preparation for spring cleaning, the peasant of many foreign countries is busily preparing magic charms for ridding her home of evil spirits, and incidentally, of dirt.

In central Europe the annual witch-expelling ceremonies begin around April. Sometimes water blessed in church is used in these purification rites. Sometimes incantations are chanted over rivers.

In the Tyrol homes are cleaned carefully and fumigated with rue and juniper berries while church bells are rung, whips are cracked, and twigs burned to drive away the evil spirits.

Superstitious Armenians never sweep by night lest they inadvertently hit some invisible demon. If they should be compelled to sweep after dark, they singe the broom so as to give warning of their approach.

Many Italian peasants wait until mid-winter for their special housecleaning ceremonies. On Saint Sylvester's evening inhabitants of Trieste who are superstitiously inclined arm themselves with sticks and brooms and form a procession to cast the spirits of darkness out of their homes. After a suitable interval, they invite the friendly spirits to come in. The spring ceremonies in Calabria are appealingly simple. As the church bells peal forth at Easter time, the natives bid temptation to depart and good to enter while they sprinkle their newly-cleaned homes with holy water.

The urge to put the home on a par with the fresh beauty of the spring landscape is universal and the housewife who shines up everything with soap and water, and sunshine and fresh air, is taking part in a world-wide ceremony to celebrate nature's awakening.

The Vatican in Rome is the largest residence in the world.

Ever-Favored Bedroom Style

Early American furniture, sturdy of material and construction, and rich in our traditions, became available in popular price levels about eight years ago, and ever since has held popular fancy. The maple suite shown above is one of the most popular exemplifications of the style. It is finished in a mellow honey-amber tone.

Displays Latest In Furniture

Whether the modern housewife is "maple or mahogany minded," she will find at the Batson Furniture company, 44 West Fourth street, a smart new line of spring and summer furniture.

Batson's, during Better Homes week are featuring bedroom furniture of the latest summer design.

Among the newest in dining room suites, is maple with "Cape Cod" charm that will enhance the beauty of better homes everywhere.

The newest note in living room furniture is comfort in the home. This is displayed at Batson's in large roomy davenports and chairs that make up both two and three piece living room suites

EXTENDS LIFE OF RUG

Proper humidity in a room will increase the life of the wool pile carpet or rug. Wool wears longer, better, if the air in the room has a proper degree of moisture. In that respect your carpet is like a human.

Art Metal Steel Cabinets Fit Any Kitchen

Beauty plus efficiency is the description often applied to the Art Metal "Work Center" kitchens, equipped with Art Metal cabinets and sinks, which are distributed in Mansfield by the Charles Ritter company, North Main street.

Adding distinction and convenience to the better home, Art Metal products make the kitchen, new or old, into a "glorified workshop" for the housewife. Art Metal kitchens are planned along definite lines, not just put together. They make meal planning, cooking, serving and cleaning easier.

For "Better Homes week" the Ritter store offers the latest in Art Metal steel cabinets, in a variety of designs and finishes. They are built to "fit" kitchens of varied sizes and styles.

Besides cabinets and the large pieces of kitchen equipment, the Ritter store also is headquarters for distinctive window shades and Venetian blinds that give a kitchen the proper amount of light and color scheme. Shades will be made to individual requirements in a number of grades, colors and materials.

DISTRIBUTES WEAR

No floor covering gets more steady, consistent wear than stair carpet. For that reason, be sure to pick carpeting with a dense, thick wool pile surface, and order an extra foot or two to be turned under at one end. These extra inches permit periodical shifting so that new areas will come over the nose of the stairs, thus distributing the wear.

Early American

A corner of your Early American home might well look like this. The chair and table are maple, the drapery tan, trimmed in plaid green. Odd corners, given a little care in decoration, can be inviting nooks in any home. Most stores are equipped to help you out in solving knotty problems of home decoration.

Well Designed Kitchen Cabinet Saves Time, Steps

With kitchen floor space growing smaller the necessity of having every piece of furniture count cannot be over emphasied. For that reason there is nothing in the kitchen which is such an aid to the housewife as a kitchen cabinet. Mainly the kitchen cabinet provides a handy, compact and neat way of storing both food stuffs and gadgets.

Many of the modern streamlined cabinets come equipped with a variety of metal or glass containers for spices, flour, sugar, coffee and other staples. The shelves are wide and deep yet low enough that articles can be reached without climbing.

Housewives find the kitchen cabinet a step-saver and a time-saver because it provides an ample working space for baking or other mixing and it is large enough to store all necessary ingredients for any kitchen task. All the cook needs to do is arrange her equipment, prepare her dish, and replace the materials.

Walking from stove to refrigerator, to shelf to cupboard during the preparation of a meal is reduced to a minimum. And the added neatness and cleanliness which is obtained from the smartly designed, enclosed kitchen cabinet wins the heart of every homemaker.

If you are looking for beauty in nature, a leisurely jaunt on the by-ways beats a marathon on the highways.

When you rake the lawn don't walk on the raked area. Keep it fluffed up to receive the seed and fertilizer.

GAS DOESN'T COST—IT PAYS

New Gas Range Features Are Making Life Easier In Millions of Modern American Kitchens

THE gas range of today takes the spotlight as one of the most efficient and attractive home appliances. So many and rapid have been its improvements in the past few years, that the gas stove of ten years ago is virtually out-moded. From its convenient table top to its sturdy base, the modern gas range is smartly designed to keep pace with tomorrow's style trend. As well as lovely to look at—it is superbly convenient to use. When you prepare a meal on the modern gas range your chances of complete success are ten-fold over those of mother's day. Accurate automatic controls, improved burner construction, greater insulation are features which make it easy to become an artist at the range.

Ovens Almost Human

One development after another in oven construction has resulted in a modern oven which is almost human in its operation. Among the many improvements is a flexible oven burner which will respond to every wanted baking or roasting speed. And, of course, accurate thermostatic heat control is standard equipment on all modern gas ranges. Greater insulation, too, has added to the efficiency of the oven as well as to the coolness of the kitchen. Completely automatic controls can be had on most models. Your dinner cooks while you are away enjoying other activities.

Broilers Give Delicious Results

Broiled meats and vegetables have become extremely popular food servings. The new gas broilers are equipped with advantages which enhance the convenience of this method and the deliciousness of the results. Modern broilers are speedy and smokeless. They quickly seal in the natural lucious flavor of meats and vegetables. They are easy to keep clean, too.

New Top Burner Efficiency

Much has been done to improve top burner efficiency by the development of the round, non-clog type burner. Top burners on the modern range use as much as 30 per cent less fuel than those of ten years ago. New simmer-set valves make possible "waterless cooking" and larger burners give greater heat intensity for frying. Automatic lighting has been a standard feature for several years.

These are only a few of the many improvements of the new gas ranges. If you are using a range that is ten years old, you are missing most of these big advantages. Read about the various new models on this page. Then inspect them thoroughly at the showroom of your favorite dealer.

How to Make Home Plans Fit Budget

In spring the thoughts of many families turn toward the many brides and grooms joining the parade of American homemakers. Their thoughts, in turn, center on furnishing their apartment or home to fit their budget.

Because the average couple starts out with a rather limited budget, the question arises of whether it is not wiser to purchase a few good pieces of furniture rather than many less expensive pieces.

It is always advisable to purchase furniture in the brackets above the minimum, even though this means fewer tables and accessory items for the first year or so. Since the typical couple starts housekeeping in a two or three room apartment, the chairs, davenport, and other essential pieces will take care of their immediate needs.

Spending more for furniture really pays in the long run, for good quality is always in style throughout the years, and retains its beauty and usefulness as well. Then, as the family budget permits, additional items can be added to complete the home picture.

Good Taste Growing.

Another fact to be considered is that most young people these days have good taste in home furnishings, and are guided by the furniture in their parents' and friends' homes. While they may prefer modern to traditional styles, they will, nevertheless, have absorbed the importance of selecting a definite style and working toward that goal. By keeping this in mind as they add new pieces, their furnishings will reflect balance and coherence and not a jumbled array of periods.

In planning the family budget, 40 per cent is a fair percentage to allot to the living room, 20 per cent to the dining room (less if dinette or kitchenette), 20 per cent to the master's bedroom, 12 per cent to a second bedroom (child's room or guest room), and 8 per cent to the hall. The kitchen should have a separate budget of its own, depending on the domesticity of the homemaker.

4-Star Range Gives Kitchen Modern Touch

In the modern home, more attention is being turned to the kitchen where the housewife must spend much of her time. And the Four Star Prosperity Electric range, on display this week at the Sears Roebuck and company store, is an article of equipment that will do much to give the kitchen that modern touch.

Fulfilling every requirement of an electric range, the Sears Four Star models have special features that not only lighten the household burdens but add beauty to the home as well.

Finished in full porcelain enamel both inside and out, the Four Star range is rugged and will withstand long and hard use. It is built on an all-steel, electrically welded frame.

Other features that make it a favorite with the housewife are the automatic oven timer and oven heat control, automatic oven light, handy two-piece broiler, condiment set, and two large utility drawers on roller bearings.

New Combinations In Period Styles

Continued interest is being shown in the beautiful patterns of period furniture now coming on the market. Interesting combinations which never before have been thought possible are adding warmth and charm to rooms throughout America.

Of significance is the restored interest in both Queen Anne and William and Mary styles, whose simplicity and gracefulness are winning new laurels. Sturdily carved Chippendale, comfortable and exquisitely proportioned Sheraton, and gracefully light Hepplewhite models are always box holders.

Why Don't YOU Get One?

All Dressed Up For Spring

Rapidly growing is the vogue for two-tone, all-over patterned carpets and rugs. They harmonize with almost any type of period or decoration and fill a need for floor covering that is neither completely plain nor strongly patterned. In the photograph the rhythmic fern leaf design in shades of green is shown with fine 18th Century mahogany furniture. The room with its flowers and plants and crisp accents looks ready for spring.

Light Walls In Room Make It Appear Larger

Wall colors play a large part in creating an atmosphere of expansiveness in a room. Light tones have a tendency to make any room seem larger than it really is, while darker, more somber hues have just the opposite effect. If you are planning to re-paper a small room this spring, be sure you pick a pale color paper with a small pattern.

Be careful in selecting wall paper patterns from sample sheets. It is very difficult to get the true effect of the design from such a limited area. You may like the small sample, but despise the same pattern on the walls of the room. Most furniture stores have decoration experts who will help you make the proper selection. It doesn't pay to guess.

The same rule applies to draperies and curtains. Chintzes, cretonnes, linens and silks are always preferred in small rooms, while heavier fabrics such as tapestries should only be used in large areas where there is no danger, of creating a cramped stuffy atmosphere.

Offers Ideas On Sterilizing Sour Soil

By Al C. REED

Last season (spring and summer of '37) was the most discouraging of any season in the memory of the oldest gardener. On account of the cloudy weather through spring, plants in the greenhouses grew spindly. During the month of May it was totally impossible to plant in any but the best drained beds of friable soil.

Drenching rains would beat down the tender plants and wash out seed. The wet soil was unable to be worked and, through the noticeable lack of air movement, the soil became sour and poluted with fungus. The insects enjoyed a bonanza on account of washing off spraying material and dust.

It is not necessary to tell this to old gardeners. Only those who are gardening for their first year need feel so badly or so much grief and so little pleasure.

The spores from the blight, mildews, etc., are laying in the soil only waiting for the favorable weather conditions to rise again and torment us.

Our two main disinfectants are sun and air. All ground where not planted should be spaded and left farrow (in the rough) until it becomes dry. When the ground is moist, as a rose or perennial garden, as soon as mulching can be removed safely and ground crumbles, it should be worked with a spading fork. While the ground is rough it should be sterilized. Many proprietary fungicides are sold under trade names. Some are excellent, others not. Commercial formalin is recommended here on account of reliability of use and because it can be used for treating corms, shrubs, crowns and roots of plants. Formalydehyde drenching is the easiest and less complicated of all methods of soil sterilization. Steam, hot water and baking are other methods.

Where soil can be worked over several times to thoroughly mix, the dry form can be used. To 50 gallon of water add 1 gallon of commercial farmalin, mix well and apply at the rate of one-half to one gallon to every square foot of soil. If soil is friable and dries readily apply one-half gallon then when dry enough to rework and apply other one-half gallon. Cover with paper, oilcloth, etc., to hold in the fumes. After 24 hours uncover. Leave in this condition until odor is gone, usually 10 days.

Fertility and humous should then be added; soil worked down and planted. Keep ground well worked, especially after each rain or watering to allow entrance of sun and air. Don't mulch flower beds until necessary. Moisture can be conserved by keeping the soil well stirred. After a rain, as soon as the soil shows signs of cracking, work the surface. During the latter part of July or August it is well to mulch. This gives the gardener a little time to rest.

A little blood meal worked around Iris will make larger, more brilliant and velvety blues which will last longer if cut or left in the garden. Well fed Iris give beautiful foliage effects throughout summer.

Eight New Tricks To Make Homes More Attractive

There are a number of practices which experts follow, which any home-maker may apply to her own home. These include:

1. Achieve room balance by the effective use of pairs—tables at each end of a sofa—lamps, or vases. Do not overdo, however, or the room will become monotonous.
2. Be sure to get a pleasing balance between plain and figured effects—too much pattern becomes restless—too little pattern is uninteresting.
3. Arrange furniture in groups according to use—writing group, reading group or visiting group, for instance.
4. Don't place stray chairs or tables about a room with nothing to relate them to.
5. Don't set large pieces of furniture on an angle—they should conform to the lines of the room.
6. Get a smart effect by having a chair covered or upholstered with your drapery fabric—it's smart in prints!
7. Two adjoining rooms will look much larger if you use the same type and color carpeting in both.
8. Adjoining rooms can be pleasantly related by using the same color scheme, but with different emphasis in each room.

Insulating Firm Ohio's Largest

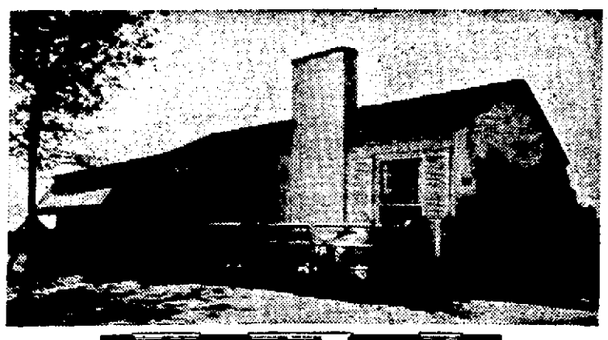
The Universal Insulating company with offices at 703 Farmers Bank building, is the largest Ohio company applicating Capitol rock wool insulation, blown in.

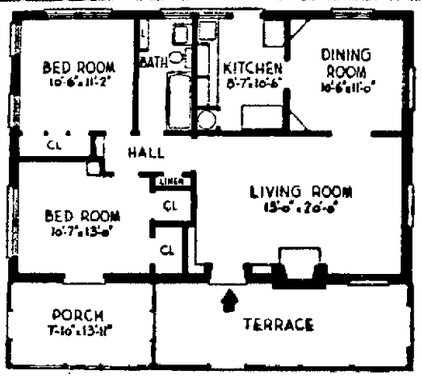
The company was founded four years ago at Van Wert, O., and since that time, its growth has been rapid. Offices and warehouses are now located at Van Wert, Marion, Dayton, and Mansfield.

Capitol rock wool insulation blown in between walls and overhead means cool, comfortable rooms in the summer; a more comfortable home in winter with as much as 40 per cent fuel savings. It also acts as a splendid fire proofing, sound deadening, and rodent proof.

In addition to applicating rock wool insulation, the company sells and installs the new Phoenix steel frame combination screen and window sash. The frame is constructed of rust resistant metal and is attached permanently to the outside of the window.

Cottage of Painted Brick





Designed in unhackneyed fashion inside and out this one-story Dallas house has outside walls of white-painted brick and roof of black shingles.

The details are exceptionally good. The windows are both high and wide, while the front door, of wood siding, is recessed to offer protection from the weather. The louvered shutters framing the porch afford ventilation as well as decoration.

The house has a terrace and enclosed porch in addition to well proportioned rooms. The living room is partly panelled in white vertical siding and has useful built-in bookshelves and cabinets. The dining room has attractive corner cupboards.

It was designed by Architect John A. Perkins and selected by The American Home, 444 Madison Ave., New York, N. Y.

Installs New Dry Cleaning System

Installation of the "Sec Dry Cleaning system" by Swan Dry Cleaners, 26 South Main street, makes it possible for that firm to provide the fastest and most efficient of cleaning services.

The "Sec" system eliminates odor, shrinking and stretching and leaves the garment free of any of the usual ill effects of cleaning. Two-hour service in dry cleaning is provided.

Swan cleaners offer the same service for drapes, curtains and other fine household furnishings.

Blond, Sun-Tanned New In Finishes

Blonde, harvest, wheat and sun-tan woods have become an integral part of the fashion parade. Natural mahogany and natural oak are in favor, while a grayish walnut is coming up. Pickled pine remains a prestige wood and is being combined with mahogany, cherry or rosewood pieces.

POINTERS ON BUYING A HOME..

. . . Insist on the use of good lumber. For the life of a building depends on the quality of materials used. The initial savings represented by the use of cheap materials are far more offset by later expensive repair bills and replacement costs.

- Lumber homes endure for generations.
- Wood finish is friendly and warm.
- Be lumber wise — not penny foolish.
- Quality Lumber is a lifetime material.
- 14½ inches of wood has more insulating value than 10 feet of solid concrete.
- The "termite scare" may be forgotten by an expenditure of less than $10.00 when your house is being built.
- Full cellars are necessary to real comfort in this climate.
- The majority of fires start on the inside of a home.
- A frame house can be readily repaired after a fire, and alterations and additions may be made at a reasonable cost.

NAZIS CLAIM CZECHS WILL DEMAND VOTE

German Expansion Question to Be Taken Up as Ministers Open Session Tomorrow.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—The heads of the French and British governments will take up the growing Nazi clamor in Czechoslovakia and its dangers to their plans for European peace agreements in important conversations beginning tomorrow.

Two developments made the Czech question paramount to Premiers Daladier and Chamberlain.

They were:

1. The prediction by Berlin Nazis that the German Nazis of Czechoslovakia would demand early in June an election on whether they desire to remain under Czech jurisdiction, or be joined to greater Germany.

2. A Czech memorandum to French Premier Daladier, rejecting as a threat to Czech independence the demands by the Nazi Leader Konrad Henlein for revision of Czech foreign policy in a manner favorable to Germany's friends, and self government with Nazi principles for the 3,500,000 Germans resident in Czechoslovakia.

Causes Shift In Talks.

Because of this memorandum, Premier Daladier was said by French informants to have shifted the subject matter of the talks from Franco-British military and diplomatic co-operation to the more specific point of the danger to France's Central European ally, and what to do about it.

France already is pledged to aid Czechoslovakia if subjected to aggression, but thus far has been unsuccessful in getting Britain to adopt a similar definite guarantee.

The British foreign secretary, Viscount Halifax, will team with Prime Minister Chamberlain when they meet the Frechmen tomorrow—six months to the day after their predecessors came here on a similar mission, but under vastly different circumstances.

Chief of the changes are:

Germany annexed Austria on March 12, Britain signed a friendship accord with fascist Italy in line with Chamberlain's policy of dealing with dictators to keep peace, and France is negotiating a similar accord.

The upshot of these changes might be a Franco-British effort by provide a possible deterrent to to lure Italy's Premier Mussoline from his nazi colleague, and thereopen Nazi encroachments in Czechoslovakia.

That there soon may be a test of Nazi strength in Czechoslovakia seems highly probable.

It didn't take the collectors long to realize the value of the wooden nickels that are available as souvenirs of the Northwest Territory celebration. The "nickels" were barely on sale when the collectors started searching for certain serial numbers. The first and last "nickel" of each of the four series of 25,000 are particularly in demand, with offers ranging from 25 to 50 cents.

Newspapers get tons and tons of unsolicited publicity matter—most of which goes into the wastebasket—butone "hand-out" from a theatrical producer's office in New York today took the cake. The office, said the blurb, had been making a survey of out-of-town attendants at Broadway shows. It had found that since "Susan and God" opened last October one (1) Mansfielder had seen it. And, went on the "hand-out" because of this "general" local interest, perhaps an enclosed column and a half of information about the producer, etc., would be of interest in Mansfield! You figure it out.

2 DEAD, 20 HURT

Ambulances Rushed to Pennsy Mine Hit by Gas Blast.

POTTSVILLE, Pa.—(AP)—Two men were reported killed and between 20 and 30 burned in a gas explosion today in the St. Clair Coal company mine, three miles north of here.

The coal company telephoned the Pottsville hospital for reservations for about 20 beds. Supplies to treat burns also were asked for, and undertakers were asked to send their vehicles to the mine to help transfer the injured to the hospital.

Water, rushing into the workings through seams opened by the blast, hampered the work of rescue.

The explosion occurred in a section of the mine under the mining village of Mount Hope about two miles from St. Clair.

NORRIS RECALLS BOYHOOD DAYS IN HURON COUNTY FLOOD AREA

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — White-haired Senator Norris (Ind-Neb) recalled events of more than 60 years ago today when he promised to help an Ohio delegation promote a flood control project near his old home.

Representatives of four counties in north central Ohio called the 75-year-old Nebraskan from the senate floor to show him photographs and other evidence of flood damage last year near his farm birthplace in Sandusky county, O.

Norris, chuckling at boyhood memories, asked about neighbors and friends still in the area.

"How long since you left there, senator?" someone asked.

"Oh gosh, it's been a hundred years or so," Norris said with a twinkle in his eyes.

Mayor R. E. Woleslagel of Bellevue, O., explained that the flood control project actually resulted from a lack of rivers and streams.

Water in the four county area of Sandusky, Seneca, Huron and Erie drains into underground caverns and sinkholes. Heavy rains last year caused these sinkholes on low farm lands to become gushers and resulted in "millions of dollars damage."

"That condition did not exist there when I was a boy," Norris said.

The Ohio group is seeking $2,000,000 to construct ditches and canals.

OLD OHIO MINE FIRE ROARS TO SURFACE AGAIN

Underground Flames Spread at New Straightsville; WPA Workers Build Barrier.

(By Associated Press)

NEW STRAITSVILLE—Ohio's attempt to "starve out" its half-century-old mine fire appeared headed for a showdown test today as the underground flames broke above the surface aagin in what old-timers described as the worst blaze in this area.

Patrolman Ellis Koon said the fire crept up through a 60-foot deep fissure late yesterday, creating a white-hot patch on the surface about 20 feet across in its widest place.

Burning about a half mile southeast of here, Koon said fumes from the fire already had forced Mrs. Mose Green to vacate the home in which she lived alone and had menaced the Ed Martin and Dave Rush properties. It was about 200 yards from the nearest buildings, he said.

Fumes Block Fight.

Because fumes kept persons at a distance, Koon said no attempt was being made to combat the surface blaze, an out-cropping from the fire which since 1884 has burned more than 6,000 acres of Perry and Hocking county coal lands valued at approximately $40,000,000.

Creeping slowly along the ground, consuming trees and anything in its path, the newest fire was about 300 yards from the Plummer Hill barrier, one of three works progress administration projects undertaken some time ago in an effort to halt the costly menace.

Several hundred WPA workers have scooped coal out of "bottle neck" places and filled the excavations with non-combustible materials in an effort to keep the fire from spreading to other rich coal seams, many of which are near the surface.

The 640-foot long Plummer Hill barrier is nearest New Straitsville, long inured to outcroppings of the subterranean fire. The other barriers are at Shawnee and Lost Run, some two to five miles distant. About $260,000 was last allotted the WPA for its fire-fighting project.

QUNTS TO JOIN DIONNE FAMILY

Guardians Say Plans Being Made to Build New Home for Wealthy Tots, Parents.

(By International News Service)

NORTH BAY, Ont.—The board of guardians for the famed Dionne quints has never intended that they should be permanently separated from their parents and their brothers and sisters. At the moment, plans are being made for the eventual erection of a beautiful new home for the entire family.

So much of future plans for the Dionnes was revealed today by Judge J. A. Valin, chairman of the board of guardians, in an interview.

Oliva Dionne has asked that the stewardship of the guardians be subjected to government scrutiny and it has been taken as a move toward claiming his wealthy tots for the family circle. But Valin indicates that it has been the intention from the outset to eventually bring the family together.

"We plan a reunion of all the Dionnes sooner or later in a beautiful country home set on good farming land and bordering one or several of the many lakes that dot the Corbeil countryside," Valin reported.

"This farm will be stocked with thoroughbred cattle and everything necessary to give the girls' father the opportunity to live the life of a happy farmer."

SUBMITS PLAN FOR STUDY OF WORKING COSTS

Union Wants Committee to Decide If Slash Is to Be Permanent.

(By International News Service)

AKRON — A six-cent-per-hour wage reduction pending cost investigation by a neutral committee was proposed to the B. F. Goodrich company by the United Rubber Workers of America today.

The proposal, first voluntary wage cut to be offered by the URW, a CIO affiliate, was part of a five-point compromise program presented to T. G. Graham, Goodrich vice president. It was to be considered in conferences today.

The wage cut was to be temporary, according to L. L. Callahan, president of the Goodrich URW local, pending the findings of a committee to be made up of one member from the U. S. department of labor, one from the department of commerce and one to be appointed by the other two.

Westbrook Pegler's column will resume on this page tomorrow.

If the committee found costs justified the reduction, it would become permanent, Callahan said. If not, original wages were to be restored.

Makes Production Report.

The union also asked that the company refrain from increasing production outside of Akron until production here "reaches normal stage," and that subsequent production increases be made on a pro rata basis.

It was further asked that further decentralization of Akron production be delayed two years, and that the company agree to a joint conference between the major rubber companies and the union in an effort to prevent wage cuts outside of Akron.

Callahan said the wage cut would approximate 10 per cent for all workers, and would be considerably smaller than the slash proposed by the company as an alternative to a decentraization that would take approximately 5,000 jobs from Akron.

The proposal, Callahan said, does not ask that Goodrich cease acquisition of plants in other localities, but that it would not boost production in other plants it already operates to a greater extent than production is increased here.

Hollywood Speaks—

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—When a cinema devil is afoot his favorite haunts are rooftops, alleys, and cellars.

Movie art directors are so accustomed to providing a background for villainy that their reaction to a new script is almost instinctive—when evil forces are at work they immediately begin mental designs on one or another setting from their three architectural levels of infamy.

Rooftops are perfect for skullduggery in many forms, but ordinarily suggest violence: the cops chasing the robbers with bullets singing Skylights and fire-escapes are useful, too.

* * *

The rooftop in its glamorous side is more frequently employed than the other. The old reliable penthouse, contributes Art Director Robert M. Haas, is the setting for villainy in full dress.

"The penthouse is where an art director can let himself go," he says. "He picks up his script and sees that the waitress who becomes a big star on Broadway falls for the rich shipping magnate after all. Of course they have a party after the performance. Aha! (the art director says to himself) this party naturally will take place in our penthouse."

Millionaires are murdered, womanhood wronged, and romantic treachery is rife in the good old penthouse. But Haas and his colleague, Carl Jules Weyl, had as much fun with the "20-mile" skyline panorama of New York roofs that they did for "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" as with any single rooftop or penthouse. The roofs, done in perspective, were the "dirtiest and most sinister" on their record, deposes Weyl.

* * *

The alley (this includes also waterfronts and slum streets) is always the place for somebody to get conked on the head. Haas considers especially fine the use of alleys in "The Informer," especially effective with the generous swirling fog that was used.

For a script suggesting the despair of an impoverished woman, or any mysterious dirty work, the wharves of a city are an infallible hunch in art directing circles.

The alleys and wharves represent more brutal violence than the rooftops, but the lowest level of movie infamy in the art director's catalogue is, figuratively as well as architecturally, the cellar.

"Any time the scenario writers gather conspirators into one spot," pointed out Haas, "you can wager that the art directors will locate their gathering place underground—the place to plot murders and treasons."

Flirting Has Disastrous Effects

By VIRGINIA LEE

A young man writes that he is very much in love with a girl. She says she loves him.

However, he flirts with other girls and she flirts with other boys. Each gets mad, of course, when the other flirts. She also goes places he says she shouldn't, and her excuse is that she doesn't trust him.

Do I think she loves him, he wants to know, and how can he regain her trust and prove he loves her?

It seems to me you two are wasting valuable time quarreling over nothing and acting foolish when you might be having lovely times together. You can regain her trust and show you love her, if that is really what she wants to know, by acting trustworthy, and showing in every way that you are only interested in her.

If you stop flirting she should know that your love is true. If, when you do that she goes on flirting and disregarding your wishes, you will know she doesn't mean it when she says she loves only you. Try to get her to promise to try this little plan and see if you are not both happier. If you can't do it, better stop going together.

* * *

DISCOURAGED: I suppose the first thing to say is that your trouble seems to be lack of self-control where men are concerned. If you can face that fact and determine to do better, you may be able to work out the rest of your troubles.

In the second place, are you divorced from your husband — the man you married without your mother's consent, and whom you left after two months? Because if you are not, you cannot marry anyone without being subject to arrest for bigamy.

If you are divorced, I am sure you will find there is a law in your state which makes a woman a common law wife after she has lived with a man as his wife for a certain number of years. If you are not divorced from your first husband get the divorce as soon as you possibly can, and then try to have the baby's father marry you. If he won't, but you continue to live with him, you probably will find that the law will consider you his lawful wife.

But if you want him to marry you, or continue to be your husband, leave other men alone—and strong drink too.

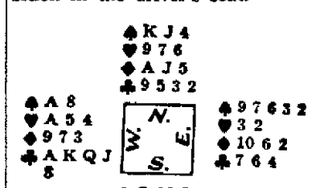
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

DON'T LOSE CONTROL

LEADING YOUR final trump to drop a defender's last one can be costly business if it involves losing control of the hand. When the opponent has a sure side entry, he may then be able to run the remnants of a setup suit. But using a long suit of your own to knock out his threatening trump may enable you to retain your position in the driver's seat.



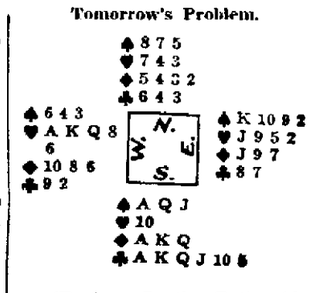
(Dealer: West. East-West vulnerable.)

The bidding on this deal started with West, who called 1-Club. After passes by North and East, South bid 1-Heart, West 2-Clubs, North 2-No Trump, South 3-Hearts and North 4-Hearts.

West cashed the club K and followed with the club Q, which South ruffed. The heart K was led and followed by the Q, which West won. West continued with the club suit, considering his best defense was to force South to continue ruffing. After winning this trick, South make the mistake of drawing West's last trump. After four diamond leads, West got in with the spade A and cashed his two clubs as well.

After trumping the club J. South should have held his one remaining trump and forced West to use his outstanding trump to ruff a diamond. Then when the lead was gained with the spade A. South would have been able to trump the club return and would have lost only three tricks.

Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

What is the correct bidding on this deal?

My Neighbor Says:

It is very difficult to grow good cucumbers out of doors in some parts of the country, and many cucumbers are grown under glass, even in mid-summer. The Japanese climbing cucumbers, however, can be grown almost anywhere, being trained on strings or chicken wire against a fence or over a trellis. It seldom succumbs to rust. China is another variety which is fairly disease-proof, but it also needs a support of some kind.

When preparing cooling drinks use a simple sugar syrup for sweetening. It mixes thoroughly with the beverage and does not settle at the bottom of the glass.

Bureau drawers are likely to stick in warm weather. To prevent this rub the smooth sides with a little furniture polish and the runners and their tracks with French chalk. Drawers will then run easily.

When preserving fruits and vegetables don't pack jars too tight. Leave a space of one-half inch at the top of each jar for water. Heat may then travel through product without difficulty.

Give Your Face Overhauling For Spring

By JULIET SHELBY

(Central Press Writer on Beauty)

Does your face feel like it needs a thorough overhauling after the long hard winter? If it does, now is the time to give it a good going over. So take time off and treat yourself to a really beneficial home facial.

Unless you are very very young, your skin will really be crying for stimulation or toning at this time of the year. You can rush to its aid in two ways, either by massage or by the use of some stimulating preparations.

When you add stimulation to your usual routine of cleansing, lubricating and protecting, you've got a home facial. Of course there are a hundred different types of facials, both professional or amateur, but all of them aim at the same thing—uplifting, stimulating and reconditioning the face.

If you are in favor of massage, be sure you follow the right technique. Otherwise you'll be doing more harm than good. Here's how it's done by builder-uppers: First bind your hair back, so you won't get cream in it. Smooth cream over your throat and face. Start at the base of your throat with a vigorous upward circulatory movement. Use the palms of your hands to massage the jaw line, starting at the tip of your chin and working up and out to the ears. Next "walk" your fingertips up the nose to mouth lines and progress up and out to the temples. Then circle each eye gently with a fingertip, outward above the eye in underneath. Last of all use strong upward movements of your fingertips up between the eyebrows and out over each eye. If it's possible leave the cream on your face for five or ten minutes. Lie down, take a bath, or relax in an easy chair.

Toning the Skin.

Remove the cream with a soft towel or tissues. Squeeze out a pad of cotton in skin tonic or cold water and pat your face. Slap vigorously on your neck, under chin and up the contour line. But pat gently around your eyes. Dry your skin and smooth on a little oily cream.

Facial kits can be purchased in all the better cosmetic lines. They are another way to have a facial at home. They tone and lift by the use of stimulating ingredient rather than by massage. These are especially good for sluggish skins.

Either method is swell to set your face right with the world and make your skin feel young and glowing.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

Mary did indeed "put her teeth into it," when, in the afternoon after our dinner and theater outing, we settled down to work in the sunny living room of our suite at the Lansfield.

We did not work in the morning, partly because we were both fatigued from our "revels," but mostly because the carpenters were busy opening a door connecting our suite with the smaller adjoining one to be used by Miss Whitlock while she should remain with us.

"Mr. Milner evidently doesn't want another run-in with you, Auntie Madge," she commented when the men, working with alacrity and evidently under pressure of authority, had finished their work and departed, and Miss Whitlock was moving her belongings into her own quarters. "How about it, Miss Whitlock? I'll bet there's a night chain on your door."

"There certainly is," Miss Whitlock said after an investigation.

Madge Is Skeptical.

"We'll test it," I said grimly, but evidently Mr. Milner had learned his lesson, for the chain was as strong and satisfactory as the ones put on the night before had been.

"You sure have that lad down in his corner with his seconds fanning him," Mary said with a grin. "Now we'll celebrate your victory with something especially scrumptious for luncheon. I'll tell you! Let's each of us name her favorite dish!"

"Just so it isn't a heavy meal for you or me, Mary," I warned her. "For Miss Whitlock, it doesn't matter, unless one of us should be taken ill, but we simply must eat light luncheons if we expect to accomplish anything."

"Nightingales' tongues and butterfly wings for me," Mary retorted, with a little moue, but she heeded my suggestion nevertheless, and when we had eaten a delicious but light luncheon, Miss Whitlock went into her own suite and closed the door, tactfully announcing her intention of "catching up with some reading."

"Now then, Teacher!" Mary said, coming over to me. "What page do you want me to begin on?"

"Where did you leave off?" I countered, smiling, taking the typed "sides" she handed me.

"Oh! as far as the words go, I think I'm letter perfect," she answered. "For Papa Veritzen went over the whole thing with me at the hotel, and was kind enough to intimate that I was 'adequate,' or would be with a little more attention paid to his shadings of expression. But—"

Her voice was suddenly the last breath of a spent top, and she looked at me doubtfully.

"But what, Mary?" I asked with suddenly quickened attention.

"I don't know, exactly," she said, her face and eyes troubled. "Maybe it's a case of 'fearing the Greeks bearing gifts' and, of course, it's lese majeste to hint that the great Philip Veritzen isn't the last word. But, Auntie Madge, I can't feel the role in the way he's taught it to me. I suppose I'm all wet and have an awful crust to make such a criticism, but all the time I'm saying the lines the way he has directed me, it seems as though I sound stilted, and was simply 'saying a piece' for a school exhibition. I don't feel that I'm living the role, and it's a wonderful one, the way you wrote it."

Doubt Assails Madge.

A sudden, stabbing doubt assailed me. I knew that Philip Veritzen was indeed the last word in stage diction. I never had heard Mary's rendition of my role, and I knew that she had the cocksureness of youth and the great talent that was indisputably hers. Might it not be possible that she was stubbornly trying to "put over" her own ideas, thus giving her father-in-law ample reason for her removal from the cast later in the rehearsals — a step which Dicky and I had suspected he meant to take?

I picked up the manuscript and turned to her first entrance speech, although I could have recited from memory not only her role, but every other word of the play over which I had lovingly toiled so long.

I knew that it was better for me to pretend to have to look away from her occasionally, and I read down the page a bit before I spoke.

"Mary," I said at last, "can you remember every direction your father-in-law his given you in this role?"

"I ought to," she retorted. "He's drilled me in them for weeks But why—?"

Household Hints

Menu Hint.

Baked Salmon With Sour Cream
Molded Tomato Salad
Baked Potatoes
Buttered Beets Lemon-Chiffon Pie
Coffee

The salmon dish requires a minimum of time and energy to prepare. The dairy-made sour cream is made artificially by the dairyman and is always to be relied upon to be the same. You can make the dish with cream that has soured in your own kitchen, however, if you wish.

Today's Recipes.

BAKED SALMON WITH SOUR CREAM—One No. 1 can of salmon, one cup dairy-made sour cream. Break the salmon into large pieces. Remove bones and excess skin. Place in baking dish and add the sour cream. Cover the dish and bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes. Serve on toast. Garnish with lemon slices and parsley. Serves four to six people.

LEMON CHIFFON PIE—One baked eight-inch shell, one tablespoon gelatin, one-fourth cup cold water, four egg yolks, one-half cup sugar, one-half cup lemon juice, one-half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon grated lemon rind, four egg whites, one-half cup sugar. Add gelatin to cold water. Let stand five minutes. Separate eggs. Put yolks into the top part of a double boiler, beat and add first amount of sugar, the lemon juice, salt and grated lemon rind. Mix well. Cook over hot water until the mixture coats the spoon. Add gelatin and stir it in well. Cool mixture. Beat egg whites past the froth stage. Add remaining sugar gradually, beating each spoonful in as it added. Whisk up egg yolks and lemon mixture, fold into the beaten egg whites. Turn into a baked shell and when serving coat over with a thin coating of whipped cream and if desired, sprinkle toasted shredded almonds or grated sweet chocolate over the top. These are not necessary, however.

Ice Cream Pie.

Have a cold pie shell ready. Beat two egg whites and add two tablespoons powdered sugar. Fill pie shell with a pint of ice cream, which must be very hard. Cut it off in slices and place in shell, being careful not to break shell. Cover with meringue and brown quickly in hot oven. Serve immediately. Two important points are to have everything ready when ice cream is delivered and to have oven hot.

Over-Worked Words Should Be Avoided.

Shine In Friendly Talk.

Lucky the girl whose warm, vivid vocabulary wins friends for her! And there's no reason why that girl can't be YOU.

Remember, enthusiasm's catching. Greet your date with "What a GORGEOUS day! Don't you feel on TOP OF THE WORLD." Abandon worn-out phrases like "NICE day," "I'm FINE."

Learn to use expressions that arouse sympathy. How much more appealing to say a CHUBBY LITTLE BOY than a SMALL FAT CHILD, or a LONG-LEGGED, WOBBLY COLT than a SCRAWNY YOUNG HORSE.

Search for words that give life and color to what you see. When you tell Jim about your day in the country, make him see the DRIFTING clouds, DANDELION-CURLY GREEN leaves, FRAGILE cherry blossoms.

Hunting for lively, friend-winning words quickly becomes a fascinating pastime. Follow the valuable hints in our 32-page booklet. How to correct vocabulary errors, talk with confidence and charm anywhere.

STAIN REMOVER FOR BRASS

A paste of vinegar and salt is an excellent cleaner for brass. Rub the article well with the paste and let it stand five minutes. Then wash each piece with hot water and soap suds. Polish with a soft, dry cloth. Several applications may be necessary.

BATTER REMOVER

Prevent dumpling batter from sticking to the spoon by dipping the spoon into cold water before taking up portions of the batter. The dumplings will then slip off the spoon easily as you drop the batter into the hot fat.

Questions Asked By Students

By EMILY POST

This is the fourth consecutive column continuing the questions sent me by a high school.

After stirring iced tea, what should one do with the spoon? Particularly if the coaster is a small one.

Answer: This is one time when you may leave your spoon in the glass. In fact, there may be no other place to put it if you are sitting at a table covered with a table cloth. At a bare table, dry the bowl of the spoon between your lips and then put it down on the table just as you would on a soda fountain.

When one makes a noticeable mistake in etiquette, should he call attention to it and excuse himself?

Answer: Remember the old adage: "Least said, soonest mended." Certainly apologize if you have done anything that involves someone else. Examples of such situations are stepping on a lady's train; running into somebody; or dropping something on someone. But don't call unnecessary attention to something that you do which is quite likely annoying only to yourself. That is, if you have to blow your nose, say nothing; if you have a fit of coughing you might gasp, "I'm sorry" at the end, or if you are yourself interrupted in the midst of something you are saying by a sneeze, then say "Excuse me." But don't say "Excuse me" every time you cough (if you have a cough); every time you hiccough (if you have the hiccoughs), but eat a cough lozenge or get a swallow of water or do whatever you can except call attention to it.

When giving a bridge luncheon at a hotel, must one wear a hat?

Answer: If you are living in the hotel and you give your bridge party in your own private sitting room, you wear a hat or not as you prefer. If you are giving it in any of the public rooms of the hotel, then you would wear a hat.

Is it permissible for a lady to wear gloves without a hat at any time. That is, when one is wearing a coat and no hat?

Answer: With formal evening clothes a lady wears gloves and no hat. To walk on the city street without a hat is never proper although all right in the country in summer.

Is it permissible on the street to wear a hat without gloves?

Answer. In a city one should wear a hat and gloves, always. In the country one does what one pleases.

When the wife's parent dies (or the husband's parent) to whom should the letter of sympathy be sent—the wife, or husband, or both?

Answer: If you know them equally well, write to the one whose parent has died. If the "other one" is your special friend you simply send your message to whichever one this happens to be.
